Over Arizona's Heights, Who Can Read Destiny? Japan Is Teaching Us. One Depression Cure.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

GALLUP, N. M., Dec. 5.

THIS IS WRITTEN on W. B. Storey's Santa Fe train the "Chief," as finely equipped and managed as any that runs on American railroads.

At this moment, leaving Ashfork, Ariz., 5,143 feet above sea level, two heavy engines are hauling the train eastward up a steep winding grade to Supai, where one engine is dropped, nearly 2,000 feet higher.

The New Mexico mountains are covered with beautiful pine trees, and deep snow.

The engines pour out thick black smoke from their oil fires. Billions of tiny creatures, whose remains deposited on the ocean's bed millions of years ago formed the oil wells used today, could not imagine their destiny.

They could not dream that energy stored up in their tiny bodies would haul millions of pounds over high mountains, and eventually be poured out in the dust of black smoke by grunting locomotives.

We that fuss and worry on the earth have as little idea concerning our destiny, or why we were put here.

BUT AT LEAST we know a little more than some of our humbler, but equally meritorious, brothers. For instance, Buster, champion steer of the Los Angeles stock show, has been bought for $1.40 a pound live weight, soon to become roasts and steaks, by Frank M. Hauser, who keeps a food market at Santa Monica.

The Pacific Coast is proud to know that its champion steer brought a higher price at auction than Chicago Champion Briarcliff Thickset, an Aberdeen-Angus yearling, sold for only $1.20 a pound. That, by the way, is Chicago's lowest price for a champion steer in eight years.

THOSE WHO believe that wishing and talking will bring peace are disturbed by actual happenings. Japan will do as she pleases in China, and it pleases her to take Manchuria, or most of it. The taking may not be called "war," but it will kill many Chinese.

Chinese students, rioting, demanding real war, will probably get a good enough imitation. The Chinese are brave as any people, but, like ourselves, they are not prepared for real trouble. Japan will show them that not to be prepared is dangerous.

THE REPUBLIC of Salvador, according to dispatches from San Salvador, is now ruled by a military triumvirate, the president deposed.

Prudhomme's saying, "Monarchies are destroyed by poverty, republics by wealth," did not tell us everything.

Poverty in national form threatens Germany's republic. This republic was doing nicely in spite of its astounding wealth, until the puzzling depression came and that depression will pass, later it will come back, nobody will know why it passed or why it returned.

ONE THING is certain, this world's authorities, those that control its wealth, must do something about the inadequate supply of real money.

Our western coast should monopolize the trade of Asia, and the Pacific Ocean, with 1,000 million human beings on the far side of it, should be the earth's greatest commercial body of water, as the Mediterranean was once, and as the Atlantic is now.

But we recognize only gold as money. Asia has no gold, only silver that we have boycotted, destroying its value. Therefore Asia cannot buy from us. She buys from England, because with gold discarded, as the standard of value, the British pound is cheap.

THIS WRITER, who at the moment, owns not a share of any mining stock or an ounce of silver except in forks and spoons, believes that President Hoover and his advisers could restore prosperity quickly by stabilizing silver value as money, at some reasonable point above the cost of production on this continent, say a ratio of 20 to one.

He believes further that if this is not done 1932 with its election will come and go with no decided change in business conditions.

For the world to think of transacting its business with only $10,500,000,000 of real money on earth, about 10 per cent of the United States income in a good year, is preposterous. To suggest that the world can transact its business on that amount of GOLD with France and the United States hoarding and monopolizing three-quarters of it, is complete stupidity.

THE BEST NEWS of the day tells first of a new light that will pierce "dense white fog," making aviation safe under conditions now most dangerous. The aviator will use photo-electric detectors to guide him toward the light, through several miles of fog.

Second, the government has decided to interest itself in disease research including the fight against cancer, heart disease, common colds that lead to many deaths. This will not please those who believe that disease is unreal. But when cancer develops, their belief, unfortunately, changes.

HUNT CHUM IN YOUTH'S SHOOTING

Robber Suspect, Nephew of Magistrate, Dying After Quarrel in Speakeasy

Wanted by police in connection with several chain store holdups, James M. O'Connor, 21, of 5802 Kirkwood street, nephew of Police Magistrate James O'Connor, was near death today in Pittsburgh Hospital from a gun shot in the back, fired, police say, by his boyhood companion and partner-in-crime, in a Larimer avenue speakeasy last night.

One of two men police are seeking as a result of the shooting is Phillip Scarpino, 21, whose friendship with O'Connor began in an orphanage and grew in a reformatory in later years. The other is Joseph Morone, 22.

The argument which resulted in the shooting occurred in a card room of a combination poolroom and alleged speakeasy at 605 Larimer avenue, when Morone, in company with Scarpino, was alleged to have taken $10 from Frank Marko, 24, also being sought by police.

O'Connor, seated at another table, said he saw the men take the money, became angry, and demanded that they return it.

Both Morone and Scarpino drew guns, O'Connor said. Fearing for his life, he sprang at Morone, seizing the latter's gun, and preventing him from firing it, he said.

O'Connor was getting the best of the struggle when Morone, according to Dodson, yelled to Scarpino:

"He's got my gun. You shoot him, and do it quick!"

Five shots were fired, detectives said.

At a hearing before Magistrate Ray Schneider this morning, six men arrested in the place were turned over to homicide detectives. Lieut. George Pischke testified no liquor was found in the place.

Missive Turned Over by Wife Tells Her How to Testify on Cash, Clothes

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service.

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Dec. 5.—A letter from Harry Powers, West Virginia "bluebeard," written to his wife and sister-in-law from prison, was expected to play an important part in the state's case against the man of many missives, when he goes on trial for murder next Monday.

The letter was written shortly after Powers was arrested for the slaying of Mrs. Dorothy Pressler Lemke, of Northboro, Mass.; Mrs. Asta Eicher, of Park Ridge, Ill., and the latter's three young children.

This particular letter is a document containing specific instructions to his wife, Luella, and sister-in-law, Eva Strother, as to how they must testify at his trial.

The missive, remarkable in other ways, written by the matrimonial letter-writing Romeo, was turned over to authorities by the International News Service correspondent and Ed Freeman, reporter for the Baltimore News. It was obtained by them from Mrs. Powers and her sister.

POWERS' LETTER

The letter follows:

"My Beloved Dears:

"We are facing a real bitter fight, but if we fight together we will win.

"Never before is the old saying—United we stand, divided we fall—been more true.

"I wish to talk to you about the latest developments, especially first about the suit which they brought against us all. They will say that the check I gave you the other day was part of the estate of Mrs. Lemke.

"All you will need to do is to

Ill Girl 'Phones To Mother, Dies

SEATTLE, Wash., Dec. 5.—(AP.)—Ill from peritonitis, Miss Shellie Shelbourne, 24, said she "could die willingly" if she could but talk to her mother in Louisville. Learning of the request, telephone company officials ordered an instrument installed in the hospital room.

After a five-minute conversation with Mrs. Mollie Shelbourne, in Louisville, who could not visit her daughter because of the expense, the invalid said "she was ready to die."

A few hours later she was dead.

EX-PUGILIST HURT IN BRAWL

Harry Pitler, 27, of 3206 Elsinore street, who seven or eight years ago was known as Jackie Ray, a featherweight pugilist, is in Passavant Hospital today suffering from a fractured skull, incurred during a fight in a restaurant at Center avenue and Roberts street, last night.

Pitler's name is the same as that of his older cousin, who was also a boxer fighting under the name of Johnny Ray—one of the best known lightweights the Pittsburgh district has ever produced. First reports confused the identity of the two.

Four men, charged with taking part in the fight, were arrested. They said they were Hyman Weisman, 21, and Mike Paradice, 22, of Cleveland, Jesse Levine, 21, of 8 Miller street, and Joseph Goldberg, 23, of 10 Overhill street.

MELLON HORSE RACE FAVORITE

GRASSLANDS DOWNS, Tenn., Dec. 5.—(AP.)—Twenty-two jumpers were nominated for the second renewal of the colorful Grasslands International Steeplechase today, but officials expressed doubt that more than 14 horses actually would face the barrier.

Sportsmen from over all the nation gathered for the event, run over a 4½-mile course with 26 brush jumps and winding hills as hazards. The track was heavy and the footing treacherous.

A grand prize of $5,000 added money and a gold cup, the gift of Alfonso, former King of Spain, were offered the winner. Second money was $1,000 and third $160.

There was no visible betting on the race, but public opinion established Glangesia, owned by Richard K. Mellon, of Pittsburgh, and Word of Honor as favorites.

Gandhi, Homeward Bound, Sad as Crowd Sings

Suffering from a cold and looking tired and worn, Gandhi managed a wan smile as he leaned from a window of a third-class smoking compartment of his train to shake hands with his well-wishers. They had garlanded him with flowers.

Gandhi planted a tree yesterday in front of East Side Kingsley Hall, where he has stayed in a tiny cubicle for several months, and remarked:

"I hope the friendships I have made in England will grow as this tree."

Asked how he had survived the blustering English climate in his scant wearing apparel, he revealed that bicarbonate of soda was his remedy for preventing colds.

'Ski Girl's' Mother Seeks To Solve Romance Tangle

MINEOLA, N. Y., Dec. 5.—(AP.)—Still weak from her mysterious collapse of last Saturday, Miss May Gledhill, Canada's "ski girl," remained in a hospital today while her mother worked on plans to untangle the threads woven about the young woman and her 2-year-old son.

Contradicting earlier reports, Miss Gledhill's physicians said she might remain in the hospital some time. They still are baffled by her illness, questions about which the young woman has answered only with a "try and find out."

The mother, Mrs. Frederick Gledhill, of Montreal, visited the "ski girl" for 30 minutes.

She later denounced William Connor, the former consulting engineer now serving a prison term for forgery, whose wife has said he was the father of Miss Gledhill's boy. Asked whether she blamed her daughter or Connor, she replied:

"Connor, of course."

She said she might see her daughter's boy, "Sonny," later but had no intention of visiting the home of Mrs. Inez Connor, wife of her grandson's father, where Miss Gledhill and her boy lived, and where Mrs. Connor had said they were welcome to continue to make their home. The boy now is being cared for my Mrs. Connor.

BOTH PARTIES SPEED MACHINERY FOR CONGRESS DRY POLL

LIBERAL RULES FAVORED BY DEMOCRATS

Caucus to Name Garner for Speaker and Rainey as Floor Leader in House

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—With an eye on a fast start, party groups and blocs in Congress today speeded final preparations for Monday's opening of a momentous session.

The House Democrats, confident of seizing the control held by Republicans since 1918, gathered to nominate John N. Garner of Texas for speaker and Henry T. Rainey, of Illinois, for floor leader, and to formulate party procedure on the issues which leadership has thrust upon them.

They began preparing also with their Senate colleagues a broad legislative program, which they hope to make a pre-convention platform laying before the people of the country the party's ideas for economic betterment. A more immediate purpose was to head off, if possible, a disorganized chase after legislation which cannot pass.

INDEPENDENTS ABSENT

The Senate Republicans, organized yesterday without aid of their independent element, were confident of controlling their chamber by virtue of a majority, despite internal friction over the President pro tem, George Moses of New Hampshire.

The prohibition vote advocates threw their weight behind the generally supported loosening of House rules while the group of independents, Republican and Democrat, and Farmer Labor, pledged itself to support the most liberal program offered.

A section of the Senate Republicans settled down to decide whether to try reducing the Democratic contingent by barring John H. Bankhead of Alabama, whose seat is contested. Two other Southerners will not be at the first session Monday, so in any case the G. O. P. is nearly sure of controlling organization.

TO MODIFY RULES

Gathering in the House chamber where early in the week the Republicans chose their leaders, the Democrats set the unopposed nomination of their leaders first on the caucus program. Rules were next for attention with an almost certain approval of a liberal program. Rainey, the leader candidate, although a dry, wanted it possible to get a prohibition vote out of the way, the Tammany delegation of 23 sought the same object to continue a fight against the Eighteenth amendment. South and North, wet and dry, the greater number sought a slackening of control by party heads.

The most controversial issue before the caucus was a proposal to create a steering committee, which would increase the leadership group from two or three to 11. A block of Garner's supporters is against it. The caucus also had to elect six members of the ways and means committee, a House clerk to replace Republican William Tyler Page, a sergeant-at-arms, doorkeeper and other minor officers.

South Trimble, former Kentucky member of the house, was the likeliest choice for clerk.

2 MURGI BOYS HELD IN ATTACK

Charles and Tony Murgi, two of the five Murgi brothers, widely known Hill district boys, were held for further investigation today by Magistrate James J. Connor in Center Avenue Police Court, pending the outcome of injuries to Edward Toland, 28, of 4630 Henry street.

Police said Toland was taken to the Passavant Hospital following a fight in Charles Murgie's home, 69 Marion street.

Lieut. John Gross said his men found a large quantity of liquor in the place. He charged that it was a speakeasy.

Two other Murgi brothers, Mike and Ben, both of whom gave their addresses as 69 Marion street, now are serving life sentences in Western Penitentiary for the murder of a man in a Fifth avenue dice game, December 26, 1926.

testify that you gave me $4,000 for the purpose of building a house at Quiet Dell. You gave me $2,000 one day and $2,000 a few days later.

EXPLAINS CHECK

"The check that I gave you was merely the return of your money as I would be unable to proceed with my plans, due to this trouble.

"I paid you back the amount partly in cash and the biggest share by check. If you will testify to this effect they will have no case against us and then we will keep our money.

"You have heard me say that I have placed the money in the bank and since I returned part of it to you by check it proves that I did deposit it as I told you.

"Testify to this, dear. Do not say a word to anyone previous to the trial but testify to it at the time.

"Now the second development is about the alleged clothing they got at the house.

"Listen, dear, it is useless for you to get them to believe that you did not know the clothes were in the house as it was impossible to get that much inside.

SUGGESTS POSE

"Here is what you must do. Now dear, when they question you again, let on that you are strongly against me. There is no reason why you should shield me and let on that you hate me for what I have done to you, and then tell them I brought the clothes from Quiet Dell—that they were from a friend who said he would call for them.

"This is all you absolutely know. This will clear you and will be in harmony with my plans.

"I asked you to write but three words to assure me you are with me.

"Do not be fooled by easy talk of the officers. Remember, dear, we must work together.

"I will defend you at the cost of my own life.

"Do not worry and be advised. Signed: "Love and kisses from "HARRY."

Law Clears Drys in Rum Deaths, McSparran Says

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—William D. Upshaw, of Georgia, interrupted a Woman's Christian Temperance Union rally yesterday and brought about 30 dry Democrats to their feet to voice their political sentiments.

The anti-Smith Democrat, a former member of the House, arose to applaud after John A. McSparren, Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture, finished an address. Upshaw shouted:

"As the first Democrat to raise the flag of rebellion against the nomination of the former Governor of New York and as the first Democrat to support Herbert Hoover, I want to thank the Lord there are still a few dry Democrats."

Several in the conference responded with shouts. All dry Democrats were asked by Mrs. Ella A. Boole, presiding, to stand. Upshaw shouted back:

"We were Democrats until our party got drunk."

Then Frank H. Wells, of Hamburg, Arkansas, jumped up. He asserted:

There are hundreds of dry Democrats in my state, and I bid you Godspeed in leading the dry Democrats to victory."

The outburst was the climax of the day's meeting. McSparren had worked up to it, asserting: "You can make the bootleggers 'think as flies' and leave the dry argument unchanged." The law, McSparren said, "frees us from responsibility" for deaths from liquor and from other alcohol consequences. He said:

"If a bootlegger goes out and forces somebody to take his wares, and he dies, that's his funeral, not ours."

ALTOONA, Pa., Dec. 5.—(AP.)—A new state road camp to give work to the unemployed is expected to be opened in Jefferson County next week, it was learned here today. Preparation of the camp, to be located near Punxsutawney, was to be started Tuesday, it was learned, but figures on the number of men to be employed could not be obtained.

GREENSBURG, Pa., Dec. 5.—(AP.)—Between 300 and 400 unemployed men were registered for work today at the new state road camp at Pleasant Unity, near here. The camp is sheltering 35 men and will take in 35 additional today. More than 800 applications have been received since the camp opened several days ago. Work was started today on a section of the Stahlstown-Lycipitus highway.

Mr. Boxer, Beethoven street, arrested in connection with an attempted holdup of a money-collection truck. He told police he couldn't meet installments on his furniture.

HOLDUP MAN'S TALE DISPUTED

Andrew Boxer, 35, of 3537 Bethoven street, whose alleged flier into banditry to save his furniture from being seized for payment of debt was short-lived, was held for court by Magistrate Leo Rothenberg in Central Police Court today.

Boxer was arrested late yesterday after he attempted to hold up Frederick C. Satterley, a collector for the Marle Gas Company, in West Carson street. Satterley grappled with Boxer, disarming him. Boxer eluded Satterley's grasp as his accomplice attacked the collector, but he was captured after a short chase.

To Magistrate Rothenberg, Boxer admitted his part in the attempted holdup. He said he had been out of work for a year and needed the money to save his furniture from being seized by creditors. He was held on charges of attempted robbery, carrying concealed weapons and pointing firearms.

At his home relatives said they knew of no threats to remove Boxer's furniture. Mrs. Boxer, they said, is regularly employed while Mr. Boxer works one or two days a week.

Weather Conditions.

The disturbance that produced the rain over the eastern half of the country yesterday and last night is now over the Far Northeast, while another disturbance is moving eastward rather rapidly from the Northwest. High pressure centered between the Great Lakes and Hudson Bay covers the lake region and southward over the Ohio Valley states, while the plateau high remains about stationary.

This distribution of pressure is causing cloudy weather over most of the country, except the southern states, and it is raining or snowing over large areas in the plains states and the Rocky Mountain states. Temperature changes were towards colder over the eastern half of the country, while over the West there was little change. The temperature will be slightly lower tonight than last night, but there is no cold weather indicated for the next several days.

JAPAN ADMITS PREPARING NEW DRIVE

Offensive Against Bandits Will Be Launched, Tokio Says; Parley Collapses

TOKIO, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—A new military drive, southwestward toward Hsinmintum, is to begin soon, it was announced today, against alleged bandits and other lawless elements in Manchuria.

The decision to make the new thrust, after the Japanese withdrew an offensive last week in the direction of Chinchow, was made, it was stated, after receiving reports said to indicate that bandits were active along the Peiping-Mukden Railroad and that Chinese troops were concentrating in the region of Tahushan and other places almost within striking distance of the South Manchurian Railway.

PARLEY COLLAPSES

Reports from Nanking that conversations between Dr. Wellington Koo, Chinese foreign minister, and Japanese Minister Shigemitsu relative to the establishment of a neutral zone at Chinchow have broken down also helped to influence the decision.

Earlier today a Foreign Office spokesman said he feared the Japanese civil government might not be able to keep the army in Manchuria in check. The fear, he said, was based on what was considered the failure of the Chinese to withdraw their troops from the Chinchow area.

PARIS, Dec. 5.—American aid was sought today by the League of Nations council in an effort to force Japan to take an open and definite stand on its policy in Manchuria.

Unable to clarify the delicate points raised in Japan's objections to the establishment of a neutral zone between the Chinese Great Wall and the Liao River in Manchuria, the council telegraphed the British, French and Italian ambassadors a request to find out just what the Japanese want.

Ambassador Charles G. Dawes, the American observer here, is asking Washington to make a similar request to Ambassador W. Cameron Forbes in Tokio.

LEAVITT FREED ON RUM CHARGE

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Dec. 5.—(AP.)—Because he did not "wilfully and unlawfully possess liquor," C. Van Ness Leavitt, retired plumbing contractor and brother-in-law of President Hoover, was a free man today.

Police Judge C. A. M. Spencer ruled at the end of a trial without jury yesterday that the California state liquor law makes it necessary to prove a defendant wilfully and unlawfully possessed liquor before a conviction can be obtained.

Leavitt was arrested last November 9 when he allegedly stepped from a grocery store with a gunny sack containing 19 pints of liquor. He said the sack was handed to him by the proprietor when word reached the store that police raiders were in the neighborhood. The proprietor, C. R. Dailey, had once been convicted of bootlegging.

$20,000 Rum Seized, Four Men Arrested

MANCHESTER-BY-THE-SEA, Mass., Dec. 5.—(INS.)—Four alleged liquor smugglers were captured and $20,000 worth of rye whisky in sacks was seized on fashionable White Cove Beach yesterday by a squad of federal agents from Boston.

Everybody Happy As Bootlegger Gets Sentence

Everybody was satisfied.

John Melare, 35, of 836 Braun street, Munhall, pleaded guilty before Judge James H. Gray in Criminal Court to possessing a still and selling moonshine. After hearing that Melare had a previous record, the Judge sentenced him to three years in the workhouse, with a proviso that he be paroled in six months.

Melare said: "I'm satisfied."

Judge Gray remarked: "All right, I'm satisfied, too."

RESIGNATION OF CAIN HELD UP

Gov. Pinchot's acceptance of the resignation of Sheriff Robert S. Cain has been returned to Harrisburg, it developed, today, after it was learned a deputy could not fill the vacancy.

Cain's resignation will be effective when the Senate confirms his successor, said to be Frank I. Gollmar, manager of the Pinchot campaign in Allegheny County. The Senate is expected to hold the appointment for a week after the Governor sends it in, before confirming it.

HUNT TOLL 21; DOE BAN SET

Associated Press.

An army of hunters again converged the vast deer area today—the fifth of Pennsylvania's 15-day season. The deaths of two gunners yesterday brought the toll of lives lost during the first four days to 21, almost double the number killed during the entire 1930 season.

Charles Ehgood, 45, owner of a road stand at Swiftwater, above Stroudsburg, died from a bullet wound in the right knee received Thursday, when the gun of a member of his party was accidently discharged. The body of Andrew Kapcha, 16, was found in the forest near Indiana. He had been killed by a stray bullet. William Haag, 35, wounded Thursday by a wild shot, died in a hospital at Latrobe, Pa.

A temporray injunction restraining gunners from shooting doe in Monroe County was granted last night by Judge Samuel Shull at Stroudsburg, pending hearing on a permanent injunction, Thursday. I. Walter Eddyger, Strouds Township, the plaintiff, named the state Board of Game Commissioners as defendants.

GIRL KILLED, 3 HURT AS CAR HITS POLE

Aged Man Run Down in Glassmere Dies; Auto Crushes Victim at Tubes

A girl and an aged man were killed and several other persons were injured in auto wrecks last night and this morning.

Frances C. Shollenberger, 20, of 209 Second avenue, Homestead, died after being admitted to Mercy Hospital following a crash of an auto against a pole at the Second avenue entrance to the Glenwood Bridge.

The injured were John J. Prendergast, 30, of 317 Allen street, and Thomas Maloney, 30, of 6635 Lyric street, taken to Mercy and Rose Gazdik, 23, of 408 Pathway street, taken to Montefiore Hospital, where one of them told doctors the dead girl's name. All were said to be injured seriously.

DIES IN HOSPITAL

Edward S. Wheat, 69, of Rosston, Armstrong County, died in Citizens General Hospital, New Kensington, last night, from injuries suffered when run down by an automobile in Glassmere. County detectives questioned David C. Monahan, of 5146 Gordon way, who took Wheat to the hospital. Before Wheat died he told detectives that the automobile which carried him to the hospital had struck him.

George Ramus, 67, of 2100 Eighteenth street extension, was crushed between an automobile and a garage door at the Pittsburgh Coal Company's garage, 1039 Second avenue, this morning. He is in Mercy Hospital. Homicide detectives said the car carried license plates issued to William Mum, 511 Sweetbriar street. The driver of the car lost control of the machine as it emerged from Armstrong Tubes and crushed Ramus against the garage. The driver, police said, leaped from the car and fled.

TWO MEN HURT

John Baker, 62, of 1226 Irwin avenue, and Jacob Krause, of 1103 Juniata street, were injured when struck by an automobile at North and Irwin avenues last night. At Presbyterian Hospital it was said Baker's condition was serious, while the other's injuries were slight. The automobile was driven, police said, by Cyril Madden, of 861 Union avenue, Bellevue.

Lawrence Curry, 18, of 123 Finley street, and Earl Montgomery, 18, of 3 Bennett place, were cut about the face and head when their car and a truck collided at Dallas and Frankstown avenues.

gas tax increase for a period of 15 months.

The letter said:

"Pennsylvania must care for the needy. It cannot give them direct relief—the constitution limits it to work-relief. No Pennsylvanian who has money to operate his car can be classed as 'needy.' Therefore, it is right and just that, having means, the motorist should do his share.

"And while he is helping the needy, the road user will be helping himself because he will buy himself more good roads.

"I ask that your organization support the proposed additional levy."

The Governor said he has received less than 50 letters from motorists protesting against the proposed tax increase. There have been eight motor clubs enter protests to the levy which he advocates.

Executives of the motor clubs were told by the Governor that "the average automobile owner and driver recognizes the gasoline tax as the fairest of all the taxes motorists pay."

PROTESTS RENEWED

Local men who received Pinchot's letter commented strongly.

W. N. Owings, of the Pittsburgh Automobile Dealers' Association, said:

"I can't see it. Experience has taught us that when they had the 4-cent tax they didn't collect 50 per cent of it. It will cause more bootlegging. A lot of bootleggers will collect the tax from the public and the state will not get it. The cost of collecting the tax will be as much as the tax revenue."

William J. Dunkle, president of the Wilkinsburg Automobile Club, said:

"I think he is all wet. He's getting away from his campaign pledges to reduce taxes. He says that only eight auto clubs and less than 50 individuals have protested. What about the Pennsylvania Motor Federation, with its 88 clubs, representing thousands? He says every time the tax is raised, the price of gas drops. That's not true. There are thousands of little fellows, hard put, who have to operate cars to make what little they are able to earn."

CLARA BOW, BRIDE, TO LAUNCH FILM COMEBACK IN JANUARY

MARRIAGE NOT TO BE CAREER BARRIER

Pair Understood Planning Honeymoon Though Bell Won't Confirm Wedding

By WALLACE X. RAWLES
International News Service.

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 5.—Clara Bow, the widely known bride, will return to Hollywood about January 1 to start work on her "comeback picture" following a December honeymoon at the 10,000-acre cattle ranch of her new husband, Rex Bell, rich cowboy film actor, at Nipton, Cal., 60 miles from Las Vegas, Nev., and 10 miles from the nearest telephone or telegraph station, it was announced at a studio here today.

Miss Bow, one-time idol of flapperdom, whose romances have been daring, was married to Bell by District Judge William E. Orr in his offices Thursday night, at Las Vegas, Nev.

The witnesses were Undersheriff R. G. McCurry and District Attorney Harley Harmon, who, as attorney for Bell, had just negotiated a private settlement of a gambling debt Bell and Miss Bow had lost on a pre-honeymoon party at the Meadows Gambling Casino.

Clara, the witness, said, wore a wine-colored sports dress, a Eugenie hat and a fur coat. Bell wore a brown business suit.

CAREER NOT IMPAIRED

Although Bell declined to verify the marriage on the ground that it would hurt a motion picture contract of Miss Bow, inquiry of Miss Bow's producer in Hollywood revealed that her career will not be interfered with by any anti-marriage contract clause.

In his cafe at Las Vegas, Robert Bow, father of the one-time Brooklyn playgirl, who became wealthy from motion pictures, stormed at newspapermen and photographers who invaded his place in search of the honeymooners.

Bell met friends at his father-in-law's cafe and admitted a marriage license had been issued. He and Clara were scheduled to leave for his cattle ranch for an "isolated honeymoon."

DESCRIBES VAST PARLOR

Bell described one of the rooms of Miss Bow's new house near his Nipton ranch house in which they will honeymoon.

"The downstairs parlor is 80 feet long. I told Clara not to build such an expensive place, but she did it anyway. At one end of the parlor is a great big fireplace constructed of hundreds of specimens of minerals. You should see it glisten when we light a fire."

Clara first went to Bell's ranch several months ago following a nervous collapse in Los Angeles after her secretary, Daisy DeVoe, had been convicted of grand theft from the actress, and after Frederick Girnau, who published a small magazine, had been sentenced to prison for sending obscene matter concerning Miss Bow through the United States mails. Girnau today was en route to the Federal prison at McNeil Island, Wash., while his victim was on her first honeymoon.

ROMANCES FREQUENT

Clara has been the center of a spotlight of news since she embarked upon her screen career. The pictures of the "It" girl were hits, and she made thousands of dollars for herself and her producers. She has a $250,000 trust fund. The principal can never be touched.

Miss Bow's marriage adds another flaming chapter to her series of spectacular romances. Her first romance in Hollywood was with a young scenario writer, Garret Ford, but she lists Gilbert Roland, rich Californian, as her first "true love."

Clara next was reported engaged to Victor Fleming, screen director and soldier. Robert Savage, football hero at Yale, and son of a rich Duluth lumberman, also became enamored of Clara.

CALL HALTS TRIP

Her asserted friendship with a Dallas, Tex., physician brought widespread notoriety, and was interwoven with her romance with Harry Richman, star of the screen and stage. She was reported en route to New York one day during the past few weeks to "do a little shopping" when a mysterious Hollywood long distance telephone call halted her at Gallup, N. M., and she returned here.

Gary Cooper, the cowboy film actor, also admitted he was very fond of Clara, and the redheaded little actress often was seen with him at Hollywood functions.

Throughout several of Clara's reported romances, Bell remained her tried and true friend; and Clara said:

"Eventually I'll marry him."

DRY CRUSADER'S GUN TRACED

CHICAGO, Dec. 5. — (INS.)—The gun with which Daniel L. Gilday, 65-year-old prohibition crusader, shot and seriously wounded Herman Knol, 17, became the source of controversy and investigation today.

Daniel Covelli, assistant state's attorney, disclosed his determination to find out how and why the veteran reformer obtained the weapon. Having telegraphed the weapon's serial numbers to its manufacturer, Covelli awaited word as to the original purchaser as the first step in tracing ownership.

Gilday contends he obtained the gun "indirectly" from Alexander Jamie when the latter was chief of the federal prohibition unit here. Jamie, however, denies it.

Today Gilday faces charges of assault with intent to kill, carrying a concealed weapon and liquor possession. The elderly dry law agitator was held in $23,500 bond.

The youthful victim of his gun, meanwhile, was reported recovering from peritonitis induced by his abdominal wound.

Banker Gets 2 Years For Embezzlement

NORRISTOWN, Pa., Dec. 5.—(AP.)—Anthony L. He appeared yesterday without counsel and threw himself upon the mercy of the court.

Depositors' Parade Checks Threat Of Bank Run

BAY CITY, Mich., Dec. 5.—(AP.)—Headed by a banner identifying them as "retail merchants making their daily deposits," 60 Bay City businessmen marched to the Peoples Commercial and Savings Bank and its West Side branch yesterday to give a public demonstration of their faith in the city's one remaining bank.

The First National Bank and the County Savings Banks closed Thursday.

Police cleared a way for the marchers through lines of people waiting in front of the Peoples' Bank and the branch. Following the demonstration the crowd thinned.

James E. Davidson, president of the Peoples Commercial Bank said his institution would pay all depositors in full if necessary.

MOTHER FREED IN TORTURE

TIFFIN, O., Dec. 5.—(AP.)—After admitting she burned the hands of her 6-year-old daughter with a stove poker, Mrs. Eliza Bland, 50, Jackson Township, was fined $25. Later, the fine was suspended when she gave evidence of sorrow, and promised to give her children better treatment.

The little girl, Helen, was kept in custody of Sheriff George Burkett, but three other children were allowed to return home with their mother, pending further investigation.

Mrs. Bland told Probate Judge V. A. Bennehoff she burned Helen to "break her of a childish habit."

The other children told Judge Bennehoff they never had received unusual punishment.

Mrs. Bland cried repeatedly during the hearing, and her plea of poverty and repentance won her the suspended fine. She keeps house for Leonard Glagg, a tenant farmer. Whereabouts of her husband is not known.

BRIDGE BATTLE FINDS WOMAN UNPERTURBED

Mrs. Culbertson to Give Dinner for 25 at Start Of Six Weeks' Contest

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—"The elder statesmen" some years ago gave a certain young woman named Josephine Murphy her first lessons in the game of bridge—partly, she thinks, "because they thought it would be a good joke to make a bridge expert out of a woman."

Next week she starts on a six weeks' contract bridge match, one woman playing with three men, and, if she and her partner win, it will cost one of her teachers, Sidney S. Lenz, $1,000.

Josephine Murphy is now Mrs. Ely Culbertson, wife of the blond young man who came charging out of Russia to upset the bridge tables of the U. S. A., and the match is to be the Culbertson system of contract bridge bidding against the new Lenz system, with a $5,000 Culbertson wager against a $1,000 wager by Lenz. Six weeks of play, 150 rubbers, perhaps 1,000 hands—no quarter asked or given.

STARTS WITH DINNER

Mrs. Culbertson is going to start it off next Monday evening by giving a dinner party for 25 guests before she sits down to play. She said:

"Oh, that won't be any bother. I'll arrange everything right after I get up that morning."

Mrs. Ely Culbertson—tall and slim, with long, splender hands, humorous Irish eyes and red gold boyish bob—knows how to do a lot of things besides playing bridge.

She is rated the best woman player in the world, and her husband goes even further than that. She is his favorite partner, he says, and the only woman worthy of being counted among the 10 best bridge players in the world.

She was the late Wilbur Whitehead's assistant—and it was while she was working for Whitehead that Lenz and some of the other experts to whom her husband playfully refers as "the elder statesmen" taught her to play bridge—when she met Ely Culbertson, then a discouraged young Russian emigre, to whom the thought of earning his living by his favorite pastime had never occurred.

STARTED HIS CAREER

"You're better than you think you are," she told him, married him, and launched him on the career which is to reach its peak next week in the match of Culbertson and Culbertson vs. Lenz and Jacoby.

Culbertson said today:

"Understand, she is playing in this match solely on her merits as a player, not because she is my wife."

Bridge is Mrs. Ely Culbertson's business. She has taught hundreds of people how to play the game. She has played herself in so many tournaments that she cannot remember offhand how many. She writes about bridge, thinks about bridge, lives on bridge—and occasionally plays bridge, "just for fun."

But it's not her favorite pastime. It isn't even the most important thing in her life. In Mrs. Culbertson's existence there are two things more important than bridge. They are: a small blonde girl named Joyce, and a sturdy little blond boy, who was christened Ely Bruce Culbertson, but who bears the nickname "Jump-Bid Ely."

FIREMEN HURT, ONE RESCUED IN ARNOLD

Two Injured at Lumber Blaze, Comrades Save Third; Damage $75,000

A fireman was rescued by comrades after he was overcome by smoke and two others were injured in a spectacular blaze which swept the Commercial Lumber Company and threatened nearby dwellings in Kenneth avenue, Arnold, early today, causing loss estimated at more than $75,000.

John Uncapher, 22, was carried from the building by fellow firemen after he was overcome by smoke. He was taken to the Citizens General Hospital, New Kensington. Ralph Stevenson, 30, suffered a sprained ankle and George Frickinsce, 25, had his back injured. Both were members of the Arnold fire department.

FLAMES SEEN AFAR

The blaze, of undetermined origin, leveled the block-long concrete and steel structure housing the lumber company and threatened destruction of a row of frame dwelling across the street. The flames were visible for more than five miles.

Loss to the building and machinery was estimated at $75,000 by R. S. Woodward, of New Kensington, and Raymond E. Jones, of Tarentum, owners.

EIGHT ROUTED IN EAST END

Eight persons were driven into the street at 7 a. m. today when fire started in the basement of the home of Harry Alpern, 5532 Avondale street, East End, and spread to the ceiling of the first floor. An overheated furnace was believed by firemen to have caused the blaze. Battalion Chief Fred S. Beckett estimated the loss at $2,000.

The fire was discovered by Mrs. Alpern, who aroused her husband and daughter, Esther; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Brooks and their 2-year-old daughter, living on the second floor, and Albert Soloman and Jacob Alpern, asleep on the third floor.

FEAR FLAREUP IN LYNCHING

SALISBURY, Md., Dec. 5.—(INS.)—Heavy police patrols guarded the city today against a race war flare-up following the 14th lynching in Maryland in 45 years.

Mack Williams, 35, Negro laborer, was hanged and his body burned by a mob of 2,000 after he had shot and killed Daniel J. Elliott, wealthy manufacturer, then attempted suicide.

The crowd stormed the Peninsula General Hospital, dragged Williams from his bed and hanged him to a tree in Court House square.

When police threatened to charge the crowd, the body was cut down and taken to the Negro settlement where it was placed on a pile of wood, soaked in kerosene and set aflame.

Williams, according to police, confessed he shot Elliott because Elliott "robbed" him by paying him only 15 cents an hour.

DYNAMITE USED TO CHECK FIRE

MULLENS, W. Va., Dec. 5.—(AP.)—Dynamite was used last night to halt the spread of fire through Maben, a lumber town of 500 inhabitants, near here.

The blaze started in an engine room of the W. M. Ritter Lumber Company band mill. Fire-fighting equipment was crippled, for the water pump was in the mill. The Virginian Railway rushed a locomotive equipped for fire fighting from its yards at Elmore. It pumped water from creeks and a small pond. The flames appeared to be under control until a high wind began to spread them. Dynamite then was used in the stocking dock to halt the fire's spread toward a planing mill. Damage was estimated at more than $100,000.

Blood Transfusion Fails, Youth Dies

Efforts to save the life of Robert McDonald, 16, of 137 Herndon street, Elliott, by a blood transfusion yesterday in South Side Hospital failed, and last night the youth died. Earlier in the day James Hickey, of Hatteras street, underwent a transfusion in effort to save the life of the youth.

McDonald's 14-year-old brother, Harry, also stood by when it was decided a transfusion was necessary. Robert developed pneumonia after he had been taken to the hospital 10 days ago with a broken arm. An appeal was made over police radio for someone to give blood, and Hickey, a friend of the sick boy, responded.

'HUNGER MARCH' RESUMED HERE IN AUTOS

525 Move on to Capital After Spurning Free Food Offered by Helping Hand

Eighty-two trucks and autos filled with motorized "hunger marchers," who neither march nor hunger, left Pittsburgh early today for Washington, where the 525 delegates plan to demand that Congress pass immediately a bill authorizing unemployment insurance.

The marchers, who come from all parts of the country, left Croation Hall, 822 North Canal street, at 6 a. m. and were escorted through town and the Liberty tunnels by two police radio cars.

From the tunnels the caravan went through Mollenauer, Coverdale, Finleyville and Monongahela. In Finleyville the "marchers" were given sandwiches and coffee by sympathizers and then moved on for brief meetings in Monongahela, Charleroi, Brownsville, Uniontown and Cumberland, Md., where they will spend the night.

WAVES TIN CUP

Speaking in Monongahela, Ben Careathers, Negro organizer of the unemployed in Pittsburgh, waved a rusty tin cup at the crowd and shouted:

"There's what we had to drink out of at the Helping Hand. I'm goin' to show it to Mr. Hoover."

Careathers' reference to the Helping Hand was the result of trouble when the delegates, offered food and shelter by that organization last night, criticized the menu, objected to the table service and finally were ordered from the hall.

MARCH IN RAIN

Soon after the caravan's arrival in two sections from Youngstown, O., and Wheeling yesterday the men walked in a heavy rain to the Helping Hand and stood in line for almost a half hour until they all had entered the building.

After the first three men to reach the dining room had been served with soup, a cry was raised by scores who said:

"Where's the committee? Do they expect us to eat this slop?"

Harry Miller, chairman of the Helping Hand, climbed to a table and shouted:

"What did you come here for, to have a meeting or to eat?"

Several men answered:

"We wanted to eat but we won't eat this slop."

Miller told them they could not have a meeting when they insisted that their committee take the floor, and ordered them all out. Simultaneously, however, leaders of the men told them to leave the place.

BOO AT HOSTS

The men marched out in orderly ranks, raising the cry when they reached the street:

"We don't want the Helpless Hand's garbage. We don't have to eat out of rusty tins."

They marched to 822 North Canal street, where they were fed by local "comrades" who furnished sandwiches and coffee. Later the men with women and children, were loaded in trucks and were sent to 101 South Eighteenth street, and to 2157 Center avenue, where meetings were held.

The meetings were orderly and broke up early. After the meetings the women and children were housed in homes here. Most of the men slept in the halls where the meetings were held.

Miller explained that the men were without reason in complaining of the food offered them at the Helping Hand. He said:

"We gave them just what we give everybody else. We had soup with pork and beans in it, and we had clam chowder. The utensils we use are all made of aluminum and they do not rust. It is probable that the utensils referred to were large tin cups in which salt is contained. They were rusted a little by the salt, but the salt was clean."

Emlenton Girl Gets Ride Here on Truck

Detectives today were awaiting word from the parents of Elma Keefer, 16, living on a farm three miles from Emlenton, Pa., who was picked up at 2 a. m. in a Liberty avenue bus station. She told police that while on her way to the Emlenton postoffice at 9 a. m. yesterday a truck driver said he would give her a ride. He brought her to Pittsburgh, arriving at 5 p. m. yesterday.

After walking about town until 10 p. m., the girl said, she became tired and went into the bus station.

"HUNGER MARCHERS," THEIR COVERED TRUCKS WAITING, STOPPING TODAY FOR MEETING AT FINLEYVILLE

Attack by Best Disrupts Hoover Home Parley

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—A clash of opinion over methods of financing home construction injected a note of discord into President Hoover's conference on home building and ownership.

Representatives of building and loan associations yesterday threw the meeting of the Finance Committee into an uproar with an attack on the committee's recommendation for development of second mortgage financing at lower interest rates.

The committee was regarded as the key group of the conference, which closes today following presentation of the last of 31 committee reports on how American homes might be improved and brought within reach of those of moderate means.

William F. Best, of Pittsburgh, President of the United Building and Loan Associations, shouted his opposition to second mortgages in home financing. He said the associations now are providing the type of financing contemplated by President Hoover's system of home loan discount banks.

Indorsement of these banks had been given by the Finance Committee in its report, saying "the committee recognizes the existing emergency and is in sympathy with the view of the President that it must be met."

'Mercy Slayer' of Mother May Escape Death

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 5.—(INS.)—Mrs. Elsie Wille, 32, Danish "mercy slayer," declared today she was ready to go to trial on a murder charge and to accept whatever punishment the law decrees for the killing of her mother, Baroness Anna von Duben.

According to the woman's confession to the police, she gave her mother an overdose of a narcotic poison because the Baroness was suffering from an incurable disease and wanted to die.

In view of the wave of sympathy for the slayer which swept over the country since the peculiar aspects of the case became known, it was generally believed she would escape the death penalty, but would probably receive a long prison term, unless the courts decide that the killing was justified.

Friends of Mrs. Wille pointed out she came forward and made her confession voluntarily, whereas she could have concealed the crime because it had been believed that Baroness von Duben's death had been accidental.

Officials of the Ministry of Justice called attention to the fact that the new penal code approved by Parliament takes cognizance of homicides in which it is shown the victim wanted to die, providing only light punishment for the slayer, but this code will not be in effect for another year. Mrs. Wille will have to stand trial under the old code, which does not take account of such extenuating circumstances.

BIBLE SUNDAY OBSERVANCE URGED BY GOVERNOR

CHURCHES HERE WILL MARK EVENT

Special Sermons, Programs Are Arranged in District By Pastors for Tomorrow

Universal Bible Sunday will be observed in churches of the Pittsburgh district tomorrow, with special services which will include sermons on various subjects.

Gov. Gifford Pinchot has urged the observance of the day in a statement issued to the American Bible Society. In commending Universal Bible Sunday, Gov. Pinchot said:

"I can truthfully say I wish it were not necessary for the American Bible Society, or any other society, or for any individual to urge observance of a particular Bible Sunday. It seems to be that every day might well be Bible Day. I agree with those who say the Bible has exerted, and will continue to exert, a tremendous influence."

Scientists Study 'God, the Creator'

"God, the Only Cause and Creator" will be the subject of the lesson-sermon to be read tomorrow in all Christian Science Churches. KRIS KRINGLE LINE WINS JINGLE

Dormont Woman Gets $5 For Christmas Shopping; Judges Have Hard Task

Hundreds of readers of the Sun-Telegraph who submitted a last line for "Christmas Jingle" No. 17, which mentioned a "lady named Pringle,' concluded that she was "single." Perhaps she is, but it was Edna Marie Schade, 1240 Biltmore avenue, Dormont, who turned in the line that made the winning jingle. The judges gave her the first prize—$5.00—for completing the jingle as follows:

There was a young lady named
Pringle
Who captured a prize with a
"jingle";
But the cash she thus earned
Was to charity turned
Bless her heart, she was playing
Kriss Kringle.

The five $1 prize winners for No. 17 were as follows: H. C. Lindeman, 1344 Marlboro avenue, Wilkinsburg; Bertha Lynwood Hamilton 554 East End avenue, Pittsburgh; Mildred Menk, 311 Fourth avenue, New Kensington; Mrs. E. D. Harshbarger, 239 Gladstone road, Pittsburgh; J. F. Diemer, 921 Main street, Wellsville, O.

Try your hand on No. 24, appearing on this page today. If you submit what the judges think is the best of all "last lines" sent in you get a check for $5. The five next best "last lines" will each be awarded $1.

READERS MAY COMPETE

All readers of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, with the exception of employes, are invited to enter the "Christmas Jingle" contest. You can send in as many last lines as you like. Equal awards will be paid to readers whose answers are tied in the judging. You do not have to buy a Sun-Telegraph to enter this contest. You may examine the files of this newspaper at the public library or at any one of the offices of the Sun-Telegraph, where you may make a tracing of the "Christmas Jingles" blank if you wish.

Each Sun-Telegraph "Christmas Jingle" will be consecutively numbered.

Fifteen other defendants were placed upon probation for two years each, and many of them were also ordered to pay fines. The others were directed to pay fines which ranged from $50 to $200.

Those given jail sentences were Joseph Vereneck, Stowe Township; William Cashdollar, William O'Day, John Yazawais and Tony Petrone, all of Pittsburgh.

Since Monday 165 persons have pleaded guilty to violations of the dry law.

JEWISH VICTORY FEAST BEGINS

The celebration of Hanukkah, the "Feast of the Lights," was started last night by local Jews to last for eight days. The celebration marks the victory of the children of Israel over the Maccabees. The beginning feast is designated by the home ceremony of lighting a candle, an additional candle being lighted each night during the celebration.

Special services were held last night in the Jewish temples. Religious plays and tableaux were to be presented throughout the week by various organizations and Sunday school classes. The observation is marked by the exchange of gifts.

At a special ceremony in the Y. M. and W. H. A. Tuesday night, the Rev. D. Meseroff will light the candles. The special festival was arranged by the Maccabean Zion Camp. The speaker will be Rabbi A. M. Ashinksy.

MUSIC

Cleveland Symphony Orchestra

Syria Mosque

PROGRAM

Prelude, Cantata No. 29 ..... Bach-Siloti
Symphony No. 4 ..... Brahms
Menuet Antique ..... Ravel
Forest Murmurs, Siegfried ..... Wagner
Rhapsody, Espana ..... Chabrier

The Cleveland Orchestra, Nikolai Sokoloff conducting, played to a fair-sized audience in Syria Mosque last night. The program was rather lop-sided both in makeup and interpretation. It is almost unbelievable that we should have to hear the Chabrier rhapsody so often on otherwise dignified programs; is there no Pittsburgh committee to say its word against such trite music? If not, then we might, with advantage, ignore these imported programs and fight with all our strength for the survival of a Pittsburgh orchestra.

Mr. Lissfelt

That these Cleveland players have improved in these many years goes without saying. Individual choirs and the ensemble gain year by year, and while all this is so patent, yet the music they make leaves one untouched, or, if moved, irate at the dullness of such music as the forest music from "Siegfried," or the unrelenting drive in the Brahms Symphony, unwarranted force that removes from that imposing score every trace of romance.

Of the novelties played, there seems to be little reason for the Siloti-Bach arrangement, an overbalanced composition as it now stands. Ravel furnished the one redeeming work of the evening, and his menuet is another graceful treatment of an old dance form.

J. FRED LISSFELT.

The Sorcerer's Apprentice .. Dukas

The Cleveland Symphony Orchestra played the second Music Lovers' Hour in Carnegie Music Hall yesterday afternoon before an enchanted audience. The music was from French composers entirely. Each work had a legendary background, and Rudolph Ringwall, who conducted, also briefly outlined the program of each composition in a happy manner.

The concert was far superior to the previous hour of several weeks ago; the players seemed far more sincere and devoted to their task. While we have heard more thrilling performances of all this music, the concert served its purpose admirably. J. FRED LISSFELT.

"You needn't tell me —I know Camel is the fresh cigarette!"

CAMELS are FRESH!

never parched, never toasted

—we guarantee that

ONE thing we wish we might impress indelibly on the minds of American smokers — the tobaccos in Camels are never parched or toasted.

On the contrary, Camels are made fresh, fresh with natural moisture — except for that the Humidor Pack would mean no more to Camels than it would mean to any other cigarette.

Camels are made fresh because the fine Turkish and mild, sun-ripened Domestic tobaccos of which they are blended are vigilantly safeguarded at every step in their handling to prevent loss of any of their natural goodness.

Let us repeat, these fine tobaccos are never parched or toasted—the Reynolds method of scientifically applying heat guarantees against that.

That's why we can safely assure you that Camels are truly fresh. They're made fresh to start with, and then kept fresh for you in the Camel Humidor Pack.

There's so much more real pleasure in a fresh cigarette you owe it to yourself to try Camels — switch to them for just one day, then leave them — if you can.

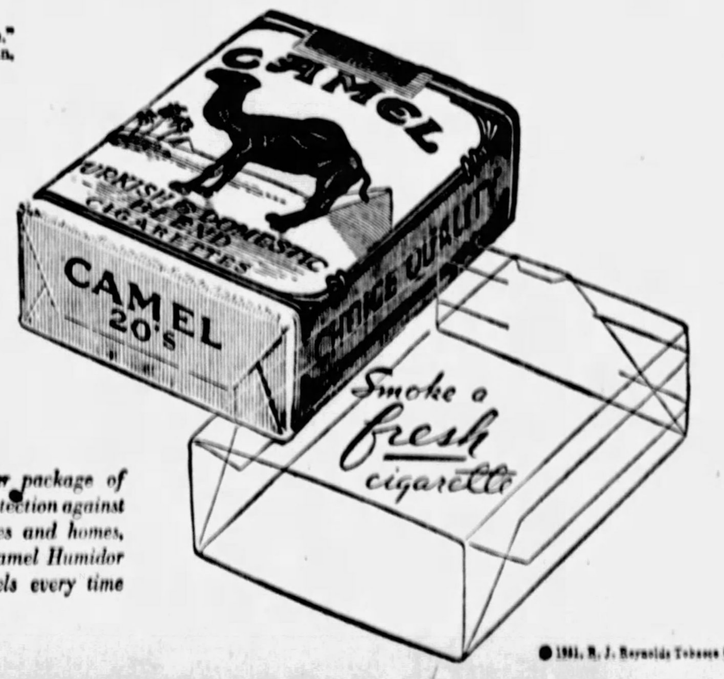
CAMELS

Made FRESH — Kept FRESH



Don't remove the moisture-proof wrapping from your package of Camels after you open it. The Camel Humidor Pack is protection against perfume and powder odors, dust and germs. In offices and homes, even in the dry atmosphere of artificial heat, the Camel Humidor Pack can be depended upon to deliver fresh Camels every time

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

In Mayfair

During the holiday season dancing will be the popular form of entertainment for the debs, when all the men will be home from Princeton and Harvard and Yale.

Just now in the pre Christmas days luncheons are the vogue, many of them small intimate affairs for the debs alone. Such a luncheon was that given yesterday by Mrs. Samuel E. Hackett in the Fox Chapel Golf Club for Lucile Todd, known to her friends as Bunny. Lucile is the debutante daughter of the William B. Todds. Covers were laid for 18 at the luncheon table, decorated with vari-colored roses.

Many faithful concert-goers were at the Cleveland Orchestra performance at Syria Mosque last night. Mrs. William Thaw, Jr., one of the most ardent patrons of music was there entertaining a box party. She wore black velvet. Others in boxes were Mrs. John M. Freeman in red and gold brocade, Mrs. William Maclay Hill in black chiffon and Mrs. George P. Bassett.

The Edward Wallis Woods, Mrs. Francis McKnight in hollyhock purple crepe and Miss Isabelle Adams in black came from Sewickley for the concert.

Others attending were the Horace Forbes Bakers, Dr. and Mrs. Lawrence P. Jacks, of London, England, guests of the Bakers, the William Watson Smiths, Mrs. J. E. Lewis, Mrs. Frederic Ickes Merrick, Mrs. Clinton Childs and Mrs. Chester V. Van Kleeck.

The younger set was represented by Ruth Willock, Betty Childs, Margaret Mann in flowered lame, who came with her father, the Rev. Alexander Mann, and Mrs. James McKay in Wedgewood blue crepe.

Betty Higgins wore white velvet with kolinsky trimming. Rosamound Fitch, black velvet trimmed in heavy white lace, and Dorothy Jarvis, turquoise crepe, and Mary Elizabeth Floyd, lotus pink crepe.

Others in the audience were Mrs. Herbert DuPuy, Rebecca Doyle, in brown lace, and Mrs. E. J. House, Mrs. Isaac Thomas and the Norman McLeods.

Boom, Not Civilization Collapsed, Women Told

A boom, not civilization, has collapsed, Mrs. Ida Wright Bowman stated yesterday in speaking of the financial depression before the Friday Morning Club in Carnegie Music Hall. It was the first of three current events talks which Mrs. Bowman will give during the season and was heard by a large audience. She urged her hearers to study current history in three dimensions, taking into consideration the past and future as well as the present. History shows that this country had emerged from previous depressions better equipped than before, she said as she went on to show some of the improvements brought about by the present depression. Children of school age who formerly went into industry have been kept in school, libraries are being used more than formerly and there has been a decided increase in clear, honest thinking in the effort to prevent future periods of boom and the consequent periods of depression.

Mrs. R. Templeton Smith, chairman of the County League of Women Voters, under auspices of which the Friday Morning Club is organized, presented a resolution that voting machines shall not be paid for until they are perfect.

WORLD CHURCH MEET PLANNED

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 5.—(AP)—The executive committee of the Federal Council of Churches in its closing session yesterday outlined plans for a world Protestant conference in 1935.

Plans for the proposed world conference were announced by Prof. William Adams Brown, of Union Theological Seminary, New York, who said the gathering would probably be held in London, designed to form a permanent international Protestant organization for co-operation in social and world problems.

During the three-day sessions the committee put itself on record on a number of subjects. Entry of the United States to the League Court prior to the forthcoming disarmament conference was urged.

A report compiled jointly by representatives of the Protestant, Catholic and Jewish religions in the United States was the subject of a private debate at the closing session. The text was withheld.

Congress Home Group Holds Yule Event

The first of the Christmas departmental meetings at the Congress of Clubs was held yesterday when the home department turned its regular session into a benefit for its mortgage quota. And, incidentally, it was one of the best attended meetings this department has had for several years.

There was an engaging program. Two groups of baritone solos were given by James Achtzehn, young radio audition winner. Miss Mathilda Flynn was at the piano for all but one number. This one, the Marianne Genet-May Neff "Captain Unafraid," was accompanied by Miss Genet, and Mrs. Neff, too, was introduced by the department head, Mrs. Evelyn Gardiner Saudek.

Mrs. J. Charles Wilson read a cycle of lovely Christmas things compiled from George MacDonald, Phillips Brooks and Lisette Woodworth Reese, which was done with piano accompaniment of Christmas music by Mrs. W. H. Patterson.

In conclusion, Miss Helen Zons, of the Joseph Horne Company, talked about refreshments for Christmas bridge and children's parties, giving many helpful suggestions and recipes, as well as showing the modus operandi. Two tables of Christmas favors and edibles further illustrated her talk.

Mrs. Robert T. Alexander won a lovely gift box which had been donated by the H. J. Heinz Company.

CLEVERLY PLACED PIN-TUCKS RESPONSIBLE FOR CHIC FROCKS

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Dec. 5.—Like life itself, there are certain fundamentals that always remain in the sartorial world. Fashion after fashion comes and goes, we argue on the superiority of the fashions that draw on the past, or modes that ante-date tomorrow. But we unite on those certain touches that bring distinction to a gown, however plain it may be in design or detail. And one of the fundamentals is the use of pin-tucks, always smart whether the garment be in silk or wool, whether it be for day or evening. And so we find the best houses each putting out frocks that rely on cleverly placed groupings of pin-tucks for their sole claim to super-chic.

AND INVARIABLY such dresses are quickly snapped up by the woman who understands the virtue of smartness attained through the medium of a simple pin-tuck. If you find such a frock, you will discover that it will fill many niches in your wardrobe, and that if it is a day-frock you will be almost living in it. Be careful, though, that the frock has no other trimming, otherwise the fine points of the pin-tucking will be lost, for it must shine alone if it is to dazzle.

TO DEMONSTRATE to you just how pin-tucks can "make" a frock, we have selected a drawing of a semi-tailored dress by Chantal. It is in bright empire green wool crepe of a soft texture. The lower part of the bodice and the top of the skirt are delicately molded to the figure by the vertical pin-tucks. A touch of the pin-tucking is also on the sleeve.

* * *

ELY CULBERTSON

Do You Play "Culbertson?"

How many times is this question asked as contract bridge players sit down at the card table?

Ely Culbertson has a tremendous following of bridge players all over the country. His "approach-forcing" system of bidding will meet its severest test when he begins on Monday evening, December 7, a tournament of 150 rubbers with Sidney Lenz, upholder of the "one-two-three" variation of the "official" system.

Culbertson thinks he can win. He has posted $5,000 for charity against Lenz' $1,000. But whatever the outcome, he will tell you why he won or lost in his own personal stories of the tournament in the Post-Gazette.

But special interest will be added to his writings in the Post-Gazette because in a parallel column will appear his opponent's version of the evening's play. Lenz as well as Culbertson will write exclusively in Pittsburgh for the Post-Gazette.

Every bridge player in the Pittsburgh district will want to follow this most unusual and authoritative series. The tournament will last six weeks—with four evenings' play each week. Order the Post-Gazette from your dealer or the Circulation Department, ATlantic 6100, so as to be sure to get all these stories.

CHILD STARS -:- Some Back on Screen; Others Forgotten -:- IN THE THEATERS -:- Talk About the Talkies; Amusement Notes

Jackie Cooper, Best of Them All, May or May Not Survive in Films

By HARRISON CARROLL
Copyright, 1931, by Premier Syndicate

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 5.

"On every side you hear praise of Jackie Cooper for his performances in 'Skippy' and in 'The Champ.' But where will he be five years from now?"

This is a query addressed to me by a New York motion picture fan. Naturally I can't give the answer for who can predict the fate of a child actor. It is possible, however, to examine the records of other youthful stars.

Jackie Cooper

One who has come back and made a name for herself is Madge Evans. In the old days Madge acted for the World Film Company. Now she is under contract to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and, if you please, is one of the most charming leading women on the screen.

Ben Alexander is working again in juvenile roles ("All Quiet on the Western Front" and "Are These Our Children"). Anita Louise bridged the gap between child actress and ingenue. Jackie Coogan, with one more to do at Paramount, has accomplished the unusual feat of enjoying two vogues as a child performer.

Mary Kornman, of Hal Roach's "Our Gang," is going to school, but works occasionally in the studios. Farina, a colleague, is in vaudeville. So are Jane and Katherine Lee, who used to work for Fox. Virginia Lee Corbin is married and, I believe, is in Europe now.

A reference to the casting directories discloses that Wesley Barry still is available, though you seldom hear of him in a picture.

As for Baby Marie Osborne and Baby Peggy Montgomery, they seem to have dropped out of sight completely.

You may argue, and I am of the same mind, that Jackie Cooper is a much finer actor than any of these other child stars. Therefore he may survive the awkward age and go right on to juvenile roles. In any event, the boy who played the "Champ's" kid should not fade permanently from the screen horizon.

LATEST GOSSIP

Edmund Goulding and his bride plan a belated honeymoon in March. They are renting a villa in Southern France. . . Tallulah Bankhead arrives in Hollywood Monday. Even with all the worry about the salary cuts, the film people find time to be curious about her. Wesley Ruggles told me yesterday he and R-K-O still have to reach an agreement on his contract. . . Harry Bannister took Dr. William Branch with him when he hopped off for Florida. . . . Tom Geraghty and his family, who used to have five apartments at the Chateau Elysee, figure in the latest merger. Tom and his wife now have a house in Hollywood. Daughter Carmelita will take another house, however. . . . When Clarence Brown swooped down out of the skies at the Palm Springs Airport the other day, he discovered the telephone line to the hotel was out of order. Since it was too far to walk, Clarence hired a horse. He had to ride up to the exclusive El Mirador, dressed in a business suit and wearing an overcoat. . . . Ramon Novarro, flanked by his lawyers, is in conference with M. G. M. today on his new contract. . . . Chester Morris says he did not buy up his contract with Roland West. The United Artists' producers merely sublet him to Paramount for a series of pictures.

Charge of Cruelty Wins Wife Divorce

Rose Mall, 24, of 3584 Elmhurst street, was granted a divorce from Robert G. Mall by Judge Elder W. Marshall on the ground of cruel and barbarous treatment.

On one occasion Mall refused to take his wife to a party, although she was ready to go. Instead Mall went out with a friend and did not return until the next day. When Mrs. Mall wanted to know where her husband had been he told her it was none of her business. They were married June 15, 1925. Mall leaving his wife June 4 last.

Rail Worker Hurt, Sues Truck Driver

T. P. Harrigan, a brakeman on the Pennsylvania Railroad, yesterday brought suit against G. A. Malarkey for $25,000 damages, alleging the latter was careless in driving his truck onto the railroad tracks at Brilliant Dam crossing, some months ago, injuring Harrigan, when the engine on which the plaintiff was riding struck the truck. Harrigan had to jump, breaking his left arm at the wrist.

Promoted?

Myrna Loy always used to portray those exotic, slinking vampires. Recently, though, she has been cast in safe and sane lady parts. Her next picture will be "Consolation Marriage," soon to be released.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

ABOARD SS. EMPRESS OF RUSSIA, Dec. 5.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Now don't get me mixed up on this Oriental pilgrimage with this fellow Floyd Gibbons. He is a war man and is over to tell you about them. That ain't my business over here at all. I am a peace man. I haven't got any use for wars, and there is no more humor in 'em than there is reason for 'em. Get your war news from Gibbons and your geisha girl news from Rogers. I am over here "scouting for Ziegfeld's Follies," and I want to see where they train these Japanese diplomats that go to an international conference and bring home everything but the desk that the treaty was signed on. That's all we got to show for the Washington disarmament conference—the desk—and we will perhaps lose it at the next one.

Will Rogers

Yours, WILL.

Twenty-Dollar Charlie

WHENEVER I think back over the list of men who enjoyed a flash of fame as night club spenders, I manage to give myself a slight chuckle. It amuses me to check them one by one—and to realize that, almost without exception, they prove to be first-class phonies in the long run. I speak at the moment, of course, only of the spenders in the last 10 or 12 years. Although I don't doubt that the same condition existed in any period.

The reason that the spender is able to enjoy himself vastly without interruption is because nobody asks questions when a man is throwing his dough around. It's when the dough drops off that the boys begin to wonder. And it's when the spender finally comes through with a bum check that the boys go into action. At this point, the game is finally over.

Of course, in some cases a spender never spends at all. I mean by that that a man can talk and act himself into the general belief that he is a big shot. Like that cheap mug in the old Texas Guinan club who called loudly for a blank check every night, filled it out for $300 so that every one could see—and received the 300 in cash. He paid his check of some $10 or $12, and then rushed around to his bank the following morning to deposit the cash he had drawn in the club the night before.

In this way, you see, he was able to cash checks for several hundred dollars in any club. The girls looked upon him with eager eyes, and—because his checks never bounced—he was good for any amount he wished. And it's highly amusing when you consider the fact that his entire bank account never ran over $300 or $400.

Just why such a man goes to all extremes to live as a big shot is something I wouldn't know about. If I tried to figure the various angles of a Broadwayite's brain I'd be even daffier than I am today. So the best thing I can do is to tell you the story of Twenty-Dollar Charlie and let it go at that. . . .

Charlie got his nickname around the night clubs. He was a man of mystery from the start—but the girls and boys all knew he was a smart guy, in some smart respect. Let's see why.

Every two or three months, Charlie would walk into a joint that appealed to him. He would begin to unload $20 bills. The headwaiter received one and the waiter was handed one as his tip. The orchestra leader wound up with one, and the coatroom girl received the same amount when she turned back Charlie's coat.

If those twenties had been hundreds the mob would have figured Charlie for a phony spender. They would have known immediately that he was just a flash in the pan and that his patronage would soon be a thing of the past. But when it came to twenties, that was a different story.

Any racketeer who is up in the money can be counted upon to toss out tens and twenties. It makes friends for him, and it's quite in keeping with his position. If he gives too much, it's just as bad as giving too little.

Charlie had the boys and girls slightly buffaloed. He never appeared in a cafe more than two nights in a row—and he always disappeared for some three months at a stretch.

There were those who said that he was in the dope racket, and those who suspected him of being a Chink smuggler. But nobody really knew—and nobody ever dreamed of asking Charlie the exact nature of his racket.

As far as girls were concerned, Charlie didn't seem to be particularly interested. His first visit to the clubs seemed to prove conclusively that women didn't form a prominent part of his life. Then he met Mildred and, as has always happened, the boys got a new slant on him. He fell heavily for the lady in question.

There wasn't a doubt in the world that Charlie was gone on Mildred, and there isn't much argument about the fact that the girl didn't exactly hate our hero, either. But Mildred was no average cafe dumbbell. She knew plenty of racketeers—and she knew the general windup of the dames who went with them. So, while she was willing to be friendly with the man, she refused to go too heavily for that thing called love.

Love didn't make Charlie cease his rather strange habits. He still dropped into the club on his two-or-three-month schedule, and he still handed out the twenties. The only difference was that he now wrote to Mildred on occasion and told her he was getting along okay.

In due time, Charlie asked Mildred to marry him. Her answer was in the negative—and for the reason I have already outlined. She didn't tell him the actual reason, because she imagined that he would understand. Charlie evidently didn't. Because he left her that night and sent her a letter a few days later.

"I think it's best I don't come around to see you no more," he wrote, in part, "because it's a little too tough on me. I don't blame you for not picking out the kind of a mug they call Twenty-Dollar Charlie. I'm only sorry I had to go and fall in love with you.

"I'm going to stick to my own business now, and cut out this idea of hitting the cafe. I only did it around four times a year—but I'm through with it altogether, Mildred, and I think we could have done okay together—but there's no use talking about that now. So long, sweet girl."

You never know what a dog-gone damsel will do. She carried that letter to the cafe owner that night, and asked him if he knew where she could reach Charlie. He said he didn't—and asked her why.

"I think I'd like to marry him," was her simple reply. "Even though he's a big racketeer, there's something terribly sweet about him. I think I could have reformed him . . .

About five months later Mildred arose one morning and picked up her favorite paper. There, on the front page, was Charlie's picture. He had been shot in a stickup, and was dying in a certain hospital.

"I knew it," muttered Mildred. "It's the way they all go."

She dressed hastily and rushed to the hospital. It was, she thought, the least she could do. She arrived a few minutes too late. An attendant told her that Charlie had just died.

That attendant was very nice to Mildred. He said he knew Charlie very well, and that the entire shooting was a great shame. Mildred agreed, but talked on her favorite philosophy.

"Those racketeers must go," she sighed. "Poor Charlie was no exception."

"Racketeer?" he murmured. "Charlie wasn't no racketeer. He worked right here in this hospital for four years—and he got a hundred dollars a month and board."

THEATER MAN'S ESTATE PERILED

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—Solvency of the estate of Fred G. Nixon-Nirdlinger, former theater owner shot to death by his wife, a former beauty contest winner, became a matter of doubt yesterday as the result of proceedings in Orphans' Court.

Executors of the estate had petitioned the court to determine what interest the estate had in a trust fund of $260,000 left to two aunts of Nixon-Nirdlinger by his grandfather, Emmanuel Straus. The executors said large outstanding liabilities made the solvency of Nixon-Nirdlinger's estate doubtful and said it was necessary to ascertain the existence of every asset as soon as possible.

Judge John M. Guest filed an opinion refusing to construe Straus' will during the lifetime of the two aunts.

Nixon-Nirdlinger was killed in Nice, France, last March by his wife, the former Charlotte Nash. She was acquitted by a French court.

Greta Garbo, looking as severe as a Prussian general, is to have a new hero in her next picture, titled "Mata Hari." He is to be Ramon Novarro, who has made love to almost every leading woman on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot.

We All Voted For Clark And Joan

By GEORGE SEIBEL

It must be a terrific strain to be as noble as Clark Gable looks, but then he has Joan Crawford to assist him in the new picture, "Possessed," which has taken possession of the Penn Theater for a week. That makes it comparatively easy, especially as Joan herself makes a fine display of nobility under trying circumstances. In view of all this, Will Hays probably granted them a special dispensation to exist without a marriage license for some thousands of feet of film, until a political campaign in which Clark runs for governor mixes matters up. The last seen of Clark and Joan they were on the way home with the best of intentions.

George Seibel

At first we had some doubts about Joan. A girl working in a paper-box factory, who loafs along the railroad track and drinks champagne offered her from the window of the dining car by a festive stranger, we thought, cannot come to any good end.

But that snap judgment was mistaken.

MOVE TO PARK AVENUE

Joan, her wits sharpened by the giggle water, waves farewell to her small-town and big-talk lover, to look up the festive stranger at his Park avenue abode. There she meets Clark, who had been badly treated by his first wife, so that he does not want to marry again.

After three or four years have been torn off the calendar, the small-town lover appears on the scene again. He is now looking for a big paving contract, which Clark Gable, as an influential politicain, can throw his way.

Clark obligingly does this and the contractor takes Joan to Coney Island in a mad burst of reckless generosity.

Then Clark proceeds to run for governor—and Joan tries a Camille "I-never-loved-you" act so as not to interfere with his career.

WAS HE ELECTED OR NOT?

In a big political meeting the wicked foes of Clark spring the awful scandal on printed bills rained from the roof. But Joan is in the audience—and she gets up and tells everybody how noble Clark is. Those that didn't know it knew it now—and Joan makes her exit cheered by the multitude.

We know she married Clark next day at the "Little Church Around the Corner," but we don't know whether he was elected or not.

But we voted for him—and so did the big audience — because Joan asked us to.

As if to compensate for the matrimonial delays of Clark and Joan, Charley Chase had a very funny pie-throwing comedy called "Hasty Marriage." And the Hearst newsreel showed us the trials and tribulations of a President when Herbert Hoover was serenaded by a church choir. It's a world full of trouble, but if you're as noble as Clark Gable looks all will be well.

Its inhabitants include Catharine Doucet, Jay Fassett, Gloria Holden, Marjorie Lytell, Reman Bohnen, Robert Foulke and Edward Wragge. Shows in the afternoon will be Wednesday and Saturday.

Small Timer says you should keep your eyes open and your mouth closed except when eating grapefruit, when the procedure should be reversed.

The Alvin today ends a week of silent meditation and on Monday it will begin a week of contemplation, the subject whereof will be "Blossom Time," that operetta of Schubertian romance and music that takes the years as lightly as a butterfly sips nectar. It has a cast that includes J. Charles Gilbert, Kathryn Reece, Joseph F. Wilkins, Robert Lee Allen and a lotta others. Midweek and weekend matinees are included in the plans.

Small Timer says the jazz age will go down in history as one in which any saxophone player is more important than a great violinist.

Three changes in bills affect as many theaters, beginning today. The Warner offering is "Blonde Crazy," with Joan Blondell as the dizzy and James Cagney as the dazed. In the Harris will be a double feature, Mary Astor in "Smart Woman," and Carmel Myers in "Chinatown After Dark." George Bancroft, in "Rich Man's Folly," will begin a three-day engagement in the Enright.

If a certain Broadwayite's idea materializes, he will open a swelegant speakeasy and peddle highballs at two-bits a shot; good beer at a dime and still make money—and palenta of it! . . . Col. Stoopnagle of the "Gloomchasers" met Kate Smith the other day and greeted her with: "Hello, folks!"

Did you hear about the new cub reporter on that eve'g rag who entered the County Court press room on his first day and seriously chirped: "Well, boys, how do you get scoops down here?" . . . That Maynard gal is married . . . To a Brooklyn laddie . . . Sinclair Lewis saw a showing of Goldwyn's "Arrowsmith" and didn't pull a Dreiser . . . Sinclair said it was swell and then started to choke up . . . I hear it's marve . . . Ziegfeld called. Said to tell you that Cantor and Jessel doing a show together is strictly the cherries, that if Cantor does a show it will have to be with Ziggie—and that Cantor announced that at the opening matinee at the Palace.

You said that Louis Adamic would have a piece in a highbrow mag on C. Darrow. . . . Adamic called. Said it won't appear in that mag, but that the mag accepted it, sent him proofs of it and then later wrote him he could peddle it elsewhere. . . . Did you see the attack by Gorham Munson on Malcolm Cowley in that literary maglet called "Contempo?" . . . Tell Ring Lardner that Jack Nelson writes elegant music, has three hit songs to his record and a hit show. . . . Norman Morrell lost his girl being loyal to his work. . . . Did you ever write the words to a war song called "Follow the Flag?" . . . A representative of the Legion was in, wanted your permission to use it in a book of war songs they will publish. . . . The records at Washington list you as the author. . . . Roy Mack the music. . . . Correct? . . . Sid Parry called. He says the trouble with Wall street is that the brokers are executing each other instead of orders.

M. Porter still works on the American Weekly. He says thanks for trying, anyway . . . Now that Russ Crouse has finished his "Seems Like Yesterday" book, I guess he will resume colyuming . . . Will you make up your mind. Is it Los Angelias or Angelees? . . . Eth Barrymore will have a fit when she sees her son make his screen debut in "Working Girls" . . . Ask your friends to stop making it more difficult for you . . . Len Libbey, that weekly's Boston correspondent, reports that "Local Walter Winchells are being let go by local sheets" . . . J. Brooks Atkinson called. Said to be sure and attend Dramatic Critics' Circle meeting today at 2 . . . See page 805 of Manhattan phone book—they list a Jimmy Peekaboo.

On Saidee, the 28th, the AT&T headquarters were without phone service for nine minutes . . . They were cutting over from the old to the new dial, and while the "dead time" was only to be a minute, something went Harry Thawish—first time it happened in 56 yrs. . . I thought you couldn't sleep unless you knew it . . Billy Glason's wife, who was seriously hurt in a crash in Chi, would like her friends to write her. At Lakeview Hosp. . . Norman Sullivan, of Stratford, Conn., says that it's about time for a good party to come to the aid of its men!

Speaking of restaurant owners who "have gone out to lunch across the street," George W. Alden, of Brockton, Mass., is manager of the Brockton Hospital . . Well, he just was made better after an operation at the Bent Brigham Hospital, Boston! . . . Donald Freeman says it'll be in the Jan'y issue of V. F. . . That means Dec. 20, I guess.

4 Horsemen Aim To Toss Moses For a Bulrush

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

The first fight in Congress on Monday will be on prohibition.

Wets expect to be defeated. But they like to vote because it keeps them indoors during the cold weather.

That's only the sideshow. Over in the main top "The Sons of Wild Jackasses" are after Senator Moses for his famous retort.

LaFollette, Nye, Borah and Norris are the four who are expected to toss Moses back into the bulrushes.

They represent the western huddle of independents which is now making the G. O. P. smile a cracked lip.

Senator Moses isn't worrying. Like the driver of a flivver most of his majority is in the back seat.

But the young independents are after him like the tough lamb that chased the butcher into the abbatoir.

Old Dreyfus Case in Davis

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

"The Dreyfus Case" opened yesterday on the Davis screen. It is the movie version of a sensational chapter from real life, which echoed around the world over three decades ago.

Dreyfus was a captain in the French Army, attached to the general staff, and convicted on a charge of high treason. He was shipped off to Devil's Island. But instead of being forgotten he became the subject of worldwide debate and his case developed into a duel between French militarism and French justice.

Dreyfus was in the page lines before our time, his arrest occuring in 1894. But, according to a thumbnail encyclopedia sketch, the picture keeps well to the facts.

However, though the facts are sensational, the film isn't. In final analysis it is spotty courtroom drama. It has little more continuity than a news reel. It lacks any sort of climaxing punch.

The reason for this, perhaps, is because it is a British-made production. English movie-makers have a way of missing opportunities to wring out the melodrama. The players, unfamiliar faces all, lack warmth and emotion.

Columbia pictures is responsible for the production's American release.

Roy Evans, Army, was chosen All-America center principally for "stopping the Pitt running attack single-handed on the Army goal line twice."

Today's Tid Bit:

Percy Boyd and Lloyd Thomas, prize fishermen at KDKA, motored to their favorite West Virginia lake recently and each promised the other a new suit if he landed the largest fish.

"Here's the winner," shouted Boyd after four minutes of quiet angling. But Thomas too had a catch and he protested.

Leaving the fish in the water, each agreed to furnish a new hat with the suit of clothes.

You've guessed it. Both had hooked the same fish.

The Loudspeaker

— By — LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—Dismissing his crooners, his quartets and other encumbrances of his radio programs, Paul Whiteman marched his jazzbos to the microphone the other night, gave the parlors—those that had not been closed for the night—the "high hat jazz concert" that he recently presented in a Chicago theater.

Dr. Whiteman and his jazzbos faced the armchairs under a handicap that would have overwhelmed less doughty musicians. All day long the parlors had echoed with the trumpetts of the symphonies, the high C's of operatic songbirds, the lullabies of Broadway charmers. The hour was late. Millions probably had gone to the quilts. But there were others who hadn't.

There were others who were curious to see what Dr. Whiteman had up his capacious sleeve. Didn't they remember that seven years ago the good maestro had taken jazz out of its rowdy clothes, its battered hat, its Bowery manner, had dressed it up in high hat and spats and presented it to the lifted eyebrows of Aeolian Hall? Didn't they recall that on that occasion the good doctor had introduced something called "A Rhapsody in Blue" by an up-and-coming composer named George Gershwin? And that as a result the lifted eyebrows were raised even higher—were raised, to be exact, in ecstatis wonder?

Yes, they remembered, remembered not only how swaggering were the new clothes of jazz, but how well they fitted. And it is not easy, they bore in mind, to fit a figure that had long been shaking with St. Vitus. So they stayed in their easy chairs, these people, prepared again to greet D. Whiteman as he ushered high hat jazz into the salons of the broadcasters.

* * *

This time he gave most of his attention to Ferdie Grofe, the Grofe of "Mississippi Suite," one of the three great American compositions written in the modern idiom (the other two are "Rhapsody in Blue" and Rube Bloom's "Song of the Bayou") the same Grofe who with his masterly arrangements has saved the programs of innumerable dance maestros.

Grofe, this time, was represented by an ambitious work called "Grand Canyon Suite." It was its first performance on the air, its second performance anywhere.

To our notion it far surpasses "Mississippi Suite" not only in its coloring, its melody, the imagination shown in the use of strange musical instruments but in the atmosphere it evokes. The composer actually gives you the spirit of the Grand Canyon, its gorgeous beauty, its vastness, its part in the Indian history of the Southwest.

DOLL LADY

Urges Little Girls Who Want a

"Honeybunch"

to hurry—the time is getting short

Read the Doll Lady's Message Today:

Dear Little Girls:

It seems like a long time until Christmas—three weeks—but it's altogether too short a time to do all the things I want to do before the holiday lamps begin to glow. I can see where I must work day and night, surrounded by a lot of busy assistants, so that none of the little girls who want one of my glorious "Honeybunches" will be disappointed.

Meet My "Honeybunch"—The DOLL Of All Dolls—

Disappointments will depend largely on the little girls. I have a storehouse full of big, adorable dolls, but it is up to the little girls who want one to get busy NOW. Don't wait until it is too late. If you want a "Honeybunch" all for yourself get busy today and you'll easily have her before Christmas.

If you delay I am afraid that you will get into that holiday rush that always comes in the Doll Lady's department Christmas week. Be on the safe side. Do the little things I want you to do and get your "Honeybunch" right away. Hundreds of other little girls have already done what I wanted them to do and have already secured their dolly. And I'll tell the world they are really happy little girls—happy beyond expression.

They are in love with their new playmate. They have all discovered that "Honeybunch" is different from any other doll, that "Honeybunch" is absolutely beautiful and that this lovable dolly can do a lot of cute things that real live babies can do. "Honeybunch" is almost as big as some of the little girls who have already taken her home—just about 20 inches tall. She has a smile that spreads sunshine and her eyes laugh with her. Yes, they open and close and her darling voice reaches your heart every time you hear it. "Honeybunch" is gorgeously dressed in dainty organdy, with lace cap and shoes and stockings to match. She has rubber arms and hands that you can wash and she is as nearly unbreakable as a doll can be made.

Please don't wait until it is too late. If you want a "Honeybunch" all for yourself send me your name and address on the coupon below and I'll write you a letter telling how easy it is to get this big, magnificent doll. And I'll send you a picture in colors.

Here are the names of some of the little girls who have already written to me: Jane Baldwin, Rita Ellen Nable, Virginia Shepard, Marie Hauk, Ruth Reihm, Marjorie Doyle, Gwendolyn Hunt, Dolores Columbus, Eleanor Losel, Shirley Hood, Betty Louise Diggins, Anna Mae Ambrose, Bernice King, Myrtle Whilton and Flobelle Clark.

TIME MARKED BY FINANCIAL OPINION

Opening of Congress Next Week and Meet of Rail Labor Chiefs Awaited

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—Financial opinion is tending to mark time until the opening of Congress next week and the meeting of railroad labor chieftains at Chicago on Monday.

Curiously enough, numerous business interests, who theoretically insist on less government in business themselves seek governmental aid when under pressure. As far as the plight of the railroads are concerned, numerous security holders are hoping for an easy way out in a voluntary reduction of wages by organized labor.

Mr. Rukeyser

In this connection, a leading firm of investment brokers, which has long been interested in railroads, Clark, Childs & Co., denied that mere wage adjustments or selected freight rate increases will meet the fundamental needs of the carriers. This house maintains that the carriers have excessive capital structures for the prevailing commodity price level, and thinks capital readjustment, which has already been drastically discounted in open market prices is necessary.

"The roads' solution," this house contends, "is a scaling down of property and capital account. Lower wages and eventually lower rates must be followed by or done in conjunction with a scaling down of property."

This is not uniquely true of the railroads. All companies which capitalized up to the hilt on the basis of 1929 prices and earnings are overcapitalized unless the country is to return to the earlier level of commodity prices. The weakness in second grade bonds expresses the belief in numerous quarters that the lower price level will prevail, yet there is divided opinion on this fundamental question. Prof. E. W. Kemmerer, of Princeton University, believes that within a reasonable time the commodity price level will recover toward the earlier standard.

ACCOUNTING METHODS

Meantime, corporations which during the boom pursued conservative bookkeeping methods and made substantial write-offs from property account, are at present in a relatively favorable position. It now appears that it was bad accounting not to set up reserves against the contingency of a fall in the general price level. One premier industrial concern which carried its plants at one-quarter of their actual cost, is now under existing depressed conditions, unable to utilize all of the plants at even the deflated valuation.

In order to avoid misleading stockholders by such write-offs, company executives should take shareholders into their confidence in corporate reports and show precisely how the final figures were arrived at. This gives shareholders who are more or less optimistic concerning the future than the company executives and directors an opportunity to reconstruct the balance sheet in accordance with their own views. Until industrial companies follow uniform accounting forms, however, it is difficult for the outsider to make adequate comparisons.

Boat Passenger Cuts Trip Short By Swim

HYANNIS, Mass., Dec. 5—(AP)—Henry J. Mainwaring, 40, of Washington, arrived for a visit with friends here earlier than expected.

Steamers do not stop while passing through the Cape Cod Canal, but Mainwaring did. He leaped overboard from the steamer Alleghany and swam ashore, saving a railroad trip back to Hyannis from Boston.

Steamship officials and friends who found his stateroom empty caused a search for Mainwaring's body before they learned of his arrival at Hyannis. Mainwaring was ordered to bed by a physician, who said he was suffering from a nervous breakdown.

Western Union Can Pay Reasonable Dividend, Says Carlton

"If our 1932 revenues continue at the level of the current year, I see no reason why Western Union should not continue to pay a reasonable dividend," Newcomb Carlton, president of Western Union Telegraph Company, said. "Western Union currently has no bank loans. The financial position is good, through economies." Carlton said. "We may borrow around $2,000,000 the first of next year to carry us over January and February, which normally are lean months. Our telegraph and cable business continues under a year ago in about the same percentage as earlier in the year. The decline in our business is comparable to that of the railroads. Our new teletype service is being well received and is expected to bring substantial added income in the future. Installation of the service has been paid for," he stated.

Delay in announcement of the details of the Treasury's plans for its mid-December financing has led to the conclusion in government bond circles that the forthcoming program will not include anything in the way of long-term obligation. Details, now expected to be published over the weekend, will, it was believed in such quarters, show the Treasury in the market with new issues totaling between $1,000,000,000 and $1,500,000,000, running probably from one to five years, with the longer maturities carrying a coupon of around 3½ per cent. Inasmuch as there is a total of about a billion short-term obligations maturing at that time, it is indicated the Treasury will seek about half a billion new money.

Operations of Marvel Carburetor Company, a division of Borg Warner Corporation, increased last month, due to renewal of several blanket contracts with automobile manufacturers who use the company's products as standard equipment. Another source of increased business came from two contracts for carburetors to be used as standard equipment on two new models of cars.

Although some of the amusement shares have been under pressure quite consistently of late, interests in Loew's, Inc., have not changed their attitude toward the stock. Loew's should be the leader in any advance which will come in the future in the amusement group because of the excellent record made in the past. The company has been able to show relatively better results than its competitors.

If the petroleum industry is approaching a point of stabilization, as quite a few interests in the financial district believe, Texas Corporation is likely to reflect the change as rapidly as any other stock in the oil group. The issue is one of the favorites in important speculative quarters.

James Murdock, president of Noranda Mines, Ltd., commenting on the resumption of dividend payments, stated that the declaration was justified by earnings. He pointed out, however, that the disbursement did not represent a commitment as to future dividend policy. He said directors felt that in view of the present business situation, any such distribution to be made should be paid as early as possible.

STOCK MARKET TAKES BRISK UPSWING

Trading Turns Dull After First Flurry of Buying; Steel and P. R. R. Advance

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—The stock market pushed up briskly in the early trading today, but turned rather dull after the first flurry of buying.

Stilling of rumors over the Central European situation evidently caused a flurry of short covering. German bonds also recovered. American Telephone and Westinghouse pushed up about 2 but the former soon lost part of its gain. Auburn rose 5. Miscellaneous issues up 1 or more included United States Steel, American Can, New York Central, North American, Pennsylvania, Consolidated Gas, American Smelting and others.

There was no substantiation for the several rumors, widely circulated yesterday, concerning financial affairs in Germany. Adolf Hitler, National Socialist leader, said his party would respect private debts, should it attain power, even though it repudiated reparations.

The market reached the weekend with an eye on the presidential message to Congress, anticipating, on the basis of Washington dispatches, that it would contain recommendations for the aid of business, notably railroads. The large short interest would be placed in a vulnerable position by a piece of constructive news, brokerage houses pointed out.

Class 1 railroad earnings for the first 10 months of 1931 were off 38.9 per cent from 1930, which foreshadows the smallest year's total in more than a decade. The net operating income indicated for 1931 is roughly 50 per cent under the record-breaking revenues of 1929.

Sterling opened heavy. Cables were quoted at $3.31, off 1¼ cents.

RETAIL SALES IMPROVE

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—Retail sales gained during the past week as compared with the previous week, according to the weekly survey by the Fairchild publications. Total volume continues below the corresponding period in 1930.

The gain in sales during the week was due to more seasonable weather. Sales have been fluctuating very closely with the temperatures. The relationship between temperatures and sales have been much closer during 1931 than during most years.

The improvement in sales has not been confined to holiday merchandise. According to reports, winter apparel sales have also gained. This has been especially true of women's coats, overcoats and sweaters. Total apparel sales are below a year ago.

Retail prices on December 1 show a decrease as compared with November 1. There has been very little halt in the declining trend of retail prices.

Will Decide Rail Bond Eligibility

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—A proposal to disregard 1931 earnings in considering the question of legality of railroad bonds for savings banks and trustees was agreed on in principle at a meeting of bankers and attorneys with the New York State Joint Committee on Banking. The proposal aims to consider as legal all bonds which were eligible as of January 1, 1931.

The proposed amendment would remain in effect until early in 1933, and is based on the existing emergency and recognizes 1931 has been an abnormal year.

Investment Trust Official Indicted

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Dec. 5.—(INS.)—Montefiore Kahn, vice-president and director of Oil Shares, Inc., a Maryland corporation with offices here, was indicted yesterday by the Hudson County grand jury on a charge of embezzling $100,000 of the funds of that concern.

Complaint was made by Val B. Holman, president of the company. The embezzlement is alleged to have occurred on October 1, 1930.

American Cigar Co. Holders Get Offer

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—Clark Dodge & Co. is making an offer for American Tobacco Company to the holders of American Cigar Company common and preferred shares not owned by American Tobacco Company of $100 a share for each preferred share and $80 a share for each common share. The offer is good until December 31, 1931. All commissions will be paid by American Tobacco Company.

Woman Gets Life For Killing Husband

FREEPORT, Ill., Dec. 5.—(AP.)—A jury convicted Mrs. Vera Witte, 30, of murdering her husband and fixed her punishment at life imprisonment.

The state charged Mrs. Witte shot her husband William, 53, to death in a fit of rage last June 9, in front of the Courthouse here shortly after her plea for separate maintenance had been denied.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

RETAIL TRADE IMPROVES HERE

Large Department Stores Report Sales Increase; Collections Still Slow

While more seasonable weather is slightly stimulating demand for seasonal merchandise, particularly at retail, extensive advertising has increased the volume of business transacted by the larger department stores, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review.

There is a moderate improvement in sale of holiday lines and it is expected that the release this week of several million dollars in Christmas savings funds and dividends paid by a closed bank will have a favorable effect upon business conditions locally. Jobbers report demand for wearing apparel and dry goods still very slow with what buying there is almost entirely for filling in purposes. A very fair demand is reported for the cheaper grade of radio sets, with furniture and household goods moving slowly. Jewelry trade is still well below normal and price reductions are being used by some of the stores to move their merchandise. Production of bituminous coal is still at a low rate, although demand for heating grades has shown a slight improvement with the advent of lower temperatures.

BUILDING AIDS LOCAL LABOR

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—To show how essential it is for local prosperity for communities to proceed with needed building operations, it was discovered, says Ernest Eberhard, managing editor of American Architect, that on the basis of a school building to cost $125,000, the sum of $52,000, or nearly 42 per cent of the total cost of the building would be spent for local labor.

This argument, advanced by Architect Henry Turner to convince the school board of Grand Rapids, Mich., should lead to similar investigations in other communities with a vew to stimulating building activities that would aid local labor during this period of stress.

SCHOOL ALUMNI PICKS OFFICERS

At the annual election meeting of Pittsburgh School of Accountancy Alumni Association, held in the Hotel Schenley, three recent graduates of the school were selected as leaders for the coming year. They are Gordon B. Brown, Fred B. Caldwell and Harold Malcolm, who were chosen president and first and second vice presidents, respectively.

Richard Khuen III, managing director of the institution, was re-elected executive secretary of the association.

Change in Accounting of Trusts Needed

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

THE NEED FOR A CHANGE in the accounting methods of investment trusts of the management type has been demonstrated forcefully by the events of the past three years. The claim made by many commentators that the fundamental policies under which earnings of most trusts are computed is wrong, has been justified. It also seems quite likely that the public would not have been quite so willing to put its money into management trusts if they had not been misled by dangerous accounting.

These comments refer entirely to investment trusts of the management type which are not to be confused with fixed investment trusts which operate under entirely different circumstances. The management trusts are corporations formed to invest their capital in the securities of other companies. Unlike the fixed trusts the management is free to buy or sell any stocks or bonds at its own discretion.

Formed During Booms

MOST OF THE MANAGEMENT trusts were formed in 1928 and 1929 when the prices of stocks were booming. Their funds were invested in stocks at such high levels that the income received from dividends on the stocks held was too small to give the investment trusts an attractive yield. The securities of the trusts were sold to the public, however, on the claim that the managements were so astute that they could secure large profits from trading operations in addition to their income from dividends and from the expected enhancement in the value of their permanent holdings.

The income accounts of the trusts actually did show substantial trading profits in the early periods of their existence. As a rule these were substantially greater than their income from dividends. Many of the trusts issued preferred stock and some of them sold bonds. This created a heavy burden of fixed annual charges which would have been justifiable if their major income had been available from steady sources but, as the facts actually stood, they were dependent to an excessive extent on the nimbleness of the management in playing the market. That managements are not infallible has been conclusively proved during the bear market.

Blind Pools

TRUSTS OF THE MANAGEMENT type have a real place in the investment picture. When properly run they give the individual of limited means a wide range of diversification and the benefit of experienced management without some of the undesirable features of the fixed trusts. But the management trusts formed during the stock market boom were not established with this end in view. They were really formed to invite the public to participate in blind stock pools. The individual was not buying income. He was merely letting some one else play the market with his money.

A legitimately operated investment trusts will, of course, buy stocks which look cheap from an investment standpoint and it may sell some of these when they appear to be unreasonably high or when unfavorable developments are feared. But its main object will be to invest its money at a good return. Market profits will be a mere incident to investment operations.

Income Accounts

A PROPERLY ORGANIZED investment trust will do its accounting with this policy in view. Earnings should not include profits from the sale of securities. The conservative method of handling this item would be to place it in a reserve to provide against the possibility of being compelled to take losses in the future.

This accounting policy will recognize the certainty that investments trusts will have profits from the sale of securities in good times and losses or shrinkages in the values of holdings in bad times. It will make legitimate investment operations the main interest of the managements and not stock market gambling. It will create a more nearly sane attitude towards this type of company in both good and bad times.

LIFE INSURANCE SALES EXPAND

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—An increase of 3,500 applications received, and $8,000.00 in volume of new business, is reported by the New York Life Insurance Company for November, as compared with the same month last year. The total for the month, President Thomas A. Buckner announced, was 25,500 applications for life insurance amounting to approximately $79,000,000.

This increase follows a gain of 1,500 applications and $1,000,000 volume for October as compared with October, 1930. The applications received were from United States and Canada in amounts ranging from $1,000 to $250,000 and were in many instances intended as Christmas presents for the beneficiaries.

Rankin to Push War Vet Pensions

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—Pensions for needy widows, orphans and dependents of World War veterans will be cought in the new Congress by Representative Rankin, of Mississippi, who probably will be chairman of the House Veterans' Committee.

The veterans' group last session approved a bill which was not acted upon, carrying these allotments: Widows with one child, $26 a month, with $6 for each additional child; orphan child, $20 and $6 for each additional orphan in the same family; dependent father or mother of 65 years or over, $15 a month individually or $20 a month for both. Rankin declares these rates "were not quite high enough."

FIRM EXPANDS PRODUCTION

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—Underwood-Elliott-Fisher Company announces the introduction of the Underwood simplex accounting machine, which may be used interchangeably as a standard typewriter and for bookeeping involving direct addition and subtraction in as many as 25 separate columns of figures.

The new machine, the seventh added this year to the company's line of accounting, bookkeeping and typewriting machines, has been designed as an economy and utility machine for small business, and for handling the heavy volume of departmental accounting work of large corporations. It may be used for billing, expense and payroll distributions, check writing, sales and cost analysis and periodic statistical reports for executives and department heads. A small lever permits the disconnection of the accounting registers and enables the machine to be used as an ordinary typewriter.

GEORGE L. HUNT

LOCAL AGENCY PASSES GOAL

Pittsburgh's famed steel masters left no more visible imprint on their industry than the many of its outstanding life insurance general agents for which it is noted, George L. Hunt, vice president of the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company of Boston, declared while here yesterday. The two greatest forward steps life insurance has taken in the last two decades, the formation of the National Research Bureau and the founding of the American College of Life Underwriters, were taken at meetings here, he said.

Hunt came to Pittsburgh to speak at a luncheon in the University Club marking the completion of the local agency's quota of new business for 1931. The Pittsburgh agency passed its goal November 28, and for the 11 months of 1931 doubled the business written in the same period of last year. Forty-six of the company's 64 agencies are ahead of their 1930 business to date, Hunt said.

LUMBER ORDERS SHOW GAIN

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—With lumber production sharply curtailed during Thanksgiving week, lumber orders exceeded the cut by approximately 22 per cent, it is indicated in telegraphic reports from 810 leading hardwood and softwood mills to the National Lumber Manufacturers Association. The cut of these mills amounted to 123,028,000. Shipments were 16 per cent above this figure. A week earlier 829 mills reported orders 19 per cent above and shipments 22 per cent above a cut of 140,377,000 feet. Comparison by identical mill figures for the latest week with the equivalent period a year ago shows—for softwoods, 449 mills, production 38 per cent less, shipments 38 per cent less and orders 34 per cent less than for the week in 1930; for hardwoods, 218 mills, production 29 per cent less, shipments 19 per cent less and orders 13 per cent more than the volume for the week a year ago.

PRICE CHANGES HOLD STEEL INTEREST

Producers Now Expect Only Mild Gain in Schedules During Fore Part of 1932

By B. E. V. LUTY

Prices have again become an interesting subject in the steel trade after a period of several months during which the whole price structure was remarkably rigid. On the one hand advances in wire products for first quarter are definitely scheduled while a western maker of strips has announced an advance on that product. On the other hand the Chicago market on bars, shapes and plates is reported down $2 a ton except on small lots, and plates and shapes, but not bars, are reported correspondingly weak in the Pittsburgh market, while there is greater shading of sheets in the South with a little weakness in the Detroit market.

In bars, shapes and plates the outcome may possibly be elimination of the $2 a ton spread of Chicago over Pittsburgh, which has held rather regularly since late in 1923 when the "Pittsburgh plus" pricing system was abandoned as to these products, prior to the Federal Trade Commission order of July, 1924. Otherwise, a lower Pittsburgh market is foreshadowed.

DOUBTS ARISE

Sellers were well satisfied with the steady market prevailing for months except that they felt some prices were too low. The majority of buyers were well satisfied, as they were relieved of uncertainty and the necessity of shopping around, while they did not feel that prices were interfering with consumption at all. Now, when some lines have weakened, there may be doubt as to the future of other lines.

An immediate result of the developments will be discouraging of first quarter contracting, which regularly has been heavier than for other quarters of the year.

DECLINE STARTED

Steel ingot production this week has been at not over 28 per cent of capacity after four weeks at about 29 per cent, representing a rise over the October average of 27.76 per cent. This is the beginning of the usual year-end decline and lower rates are to be expected, the lowest week being either the week ending December 26 or that ending January 2. Some sort of rebound immediately thereafter is virtually inevitable.

Steel producers, however, expect no more than a mild increase in activity in the first couple months of the year, of purely seasonal character, as they see no important change in fundamental conditions for that time. They are inclined to revert to the age-old tradition in steel, that when there is substantial recovery from depression it begins either in March or in September or October, other times in the year being unpropitious for an important change.

Railroads Report Net Income Down

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—Class I railroads of the United States for the first 10 months of 1931 had a net railway operating income of $472,306,294, which was at the annual rate of return of 2.05 per cent on their property investment, according to reports just filed by the carriers with the Bureau of Railway Economics. In the first 10 months of 1930, their net railway operating income was $773,287,277, or 3.43 per cent on their property investment.

TECH, DUKES SET TO CLASH

CHARITY GAME LAST FOR 16 PLAYERS

TODAY'S BIG CHARITY football game between Carnegie Tech and Duquesne University at the Stadium was to close the college playing careers of 16 of the participating gridders, eight on each side. Before another pigskin season arrives they will have been graduated. The Skibos will lose a fine tackle in Don Fletcher, a sterling halfback in Capt. Murray Armentrout, and a dependable center in Alex Ducanis. In addition to those three regulars, five reserves will depart in Kermit Ewing, Harry Ziegler and Bert Pouncey, halfbacks, and Marvin Potts and William Sketres, ends.

Don Fletcher

Graduation will deprive the Duke varsity team of 1932 of the services of three standbys in the backfield and five serviceable men among the forwards. The backs who will be leaving school for good in the spring are Bud Deveney, quarter, and Fred Cristina and Val Trambley, halves, while the forwards for whom today's game is a farewell to collegiate football are Capt. Mike Ferrare, guard; Jim O'Donnell and John Donohue, tackles; Ben Barrett, center, and Staff Murphy, end.

RUMORS OF SIDE incidents in connection with the imposing of a large number of penalties on Notre Dame in the Southern California game have brought an emphatic denial from Umpire Horace Gillette. One yarn said the umpire had threatened to throw Capt. Tommy Yarr out of the game if he didn't stop asking for explanations on penalties.

"No such thing," declared Gillette, upon his return to his home in Los Angeles, where he is local manager for a national sporting goods concern. "Certainly Yarr asked for explanations on penalties. Why shouldn't he? He's the captain of the team and was entitled to the information. But I made no threats to throw him out of the game, and found him one of the finest sportsmen I ever met or saw on a football field."

THAT'S AN EXAMPLE of how rumors and stories growing out of a football game that is important enough to attract wide attention often are utterly at variance with the facts in the case.

It was similar to the criticism of Holy Cross and Boston College on account of the $20,000 "charity deficit" after their Thanksgiving Day game in Harvard Stadium, criticism that was due in many instances to a misunderstanding of the circumstances surrounding the game.

IN REPLY to continued queries about the Holy Cross-Boston College affair it may be stated that this was not a specially arranged charity game, as appears to be the impression in many quarters, but a regularly scheduled annual number that is a traditional battle in New England, like the yearly clash of Pitt and Carnegie Tech in Pittsburgh. For years it has been played at Braves Field or Fenway Park in Boston, and usually to a capacity crowd. A committee appointed by Mayor Curley, of Boston to raise funds for charity asked permission of the two colleges to take the game over, move it to Harvard Stadium with a greater seating capacity, and donate anything over the usual revenue of the game for charity. The average annual paid admissions were figured at 32,000, and when asked to let the committee take all above that sum the colleges consented. The affair was mismanaged, apparently, and unfavorable weather helped to make the well-meant undertaking a failure.

Barry Wood

BEFORE PASSING OUT of the football picture, Barry Wood, Harvard's retiring captain, slapped a new title on the second-guessing wise boys who, after something has been tried and has failed, tell the world just how it should have been done. Wood calls them "Monday morning quarterbacks."

Barry was defending football against charges of over-emphasis in addressing the delegates to the annual meeting of the New England Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. He said the answer to over-emphasis was to be found not on the playing field but in the stands, finding

200 EXPERTS PICK HEARST ELEVENS

By FORD FRICK
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—The "Hearst All-America" team, announced today, requires little explanation and no apology.

It represents the combined judgment of nearly 200 coaches, sports editors and football writers throughout the United States. No man is mentioned, no man is named, but has been actually seen in action by some member of the selecting committee—seen not once, but numerous times.

Naturally, with more than 600 colleges putting football teams on the field each Saturday, it is impossible for any group of men to reach unanimous accord on the 11 men or the 33 men best entitled to all-America honors. For every team that is announced, it is possible to name a rival team just as good.

But, by consensus vote, it has been possible to arrive at certain definite conclusions as concerns both individuals and team play. And some of the findings in the consensus vote have been especially interesting.

DALRYMPLE POPULAR

Only four men of the eleven named for first team honors were anywhere near unanimous selections. Jerry Dalrymple, of Tulane, at end, and Marchmont Schwartz, of Notre Dame, at halfback, came close to unanimous decision. Dalrymple scored 184, and Schwartz scored 196 out of a possible 225 points.

Rentner, Northwestern back, with 189 points, and Munn, Minnesota tackle, with 183 points, rated up with the leaders.

As concerns the others, it was a dogfight. Barry Wood, of Harvard, won the quarterback selection by a scant 11 points over Shaver, of U. S. C., and Zimmerman, of Tulane, nosed out McEver, of Tennessee, for the other back position by only two points.

To show how varied the vote was, there were nine ends, 11 tackles, eight guards, six centers, seven quarterbacks and 15 backs who received 60 or more points each in the voting—proof of the fact that talent is widely separated and of fairly even caliber throughout the country.

TEAMS ON PAR

As to the teams themselves, they're so nearly on a par that they're interchangable. The second team, as a matter of fact, probably could hold its own with the first team, and the third team—if it came down to cases—probably would hold its own with the second.

In other words, it's impossible to select one team of 11 men and let it go at that. Even 33 men selections must of necessity leave out many fine outstanding players. So in this selection there really isn't much difference between the three teams. They are designated as first, second and third teams simply because there can be only 11 men named on one outfit—and not because there is any real difference in their abilities.

Further than that—well, no alibis are needed. The teams represent the best judgment and knowledge of some 200 of the best known coaches, editors and writers in the country. It is presented, not as a perfect selection, but as a sane, well-grounded solution of a problem that grows tougher and tougher each season.

LOOP CONFAB TOMORROW

There will be a meeting of the Tri-County Basketball League in the sports department of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph at 2:30 tomorrow afternoon. President Lebowitz has requested all of last season's managers to be on hand, together with representatives of any club that desires to join.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: ALPINE—Miss Alpine Blitch, of Miami, the Florida Fat Girl, is known as the world's fattest lady. Alpine weighed 200 pounds at the age of 3 years and 400 at the age of 12, and even gained three pounds while ill with whooping cough. At present, she tips the scales at 732 pounds, although she is only 20 years old. The most remarkable thing about Alpine is that she has no double chin, despite her weight. THE JUDGE WITHOUT A COURT—Judge Harry F. Newton, of Tennessee, was elected judge of the Juvenile Court in the general county election of Hamilton County in August, 1930, and then learned there was no court for him. The Juvenile Court was created by the Legislature at Nashville, but the county never appropriated any funds for it. Judge Newton is known by his townsfolk as "The Judge with a heart and no court."

TOMORROW: THE MAN WHO MADE THE WORLD LAUGH.

TULANE PLAYS WASH. STATE

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—Tulane and Tennessee, Dixie's two undefeated gridiron leaders, hold the national spotlight today as they go against Washington State and New York University respectively at New Orleans and New York.

Tulane, with an invitation to the Rose Bowl and a claim on the mythical national title at stake, meets a doughty foe in Washington State, which last year won the Pacific Coast title and represented the West in the Tournament of Roses game against Alabama. The Cougars have not been too impressive this year, but the underdog has bitten the hand of the form picker so often it would take a brave one to pick Tulane a sure winner, as the Green Wave appears on the record.

MUDDY FIELD FOR N. Y. U.

Tennessee will have its hands full protecting an unbeaten record from a New York University team, which will have its full strength on the field for the first time since the meeting with Colgate in midseason. A muddy field is in prospect, a favorable omen

HARTLEY NAMED BUC COACH

Grover Hartley, star catcher of the New York Giants 15 years ago, and a coach for McGraw's club in recent years, today was signed as Pirate coach to succeed Oscar Stange, who was released last September.

Manager George Gibson signed Hartley in Chicago, according to a message received at the local office today. Hartley's home is in Columbus. He is aged 42.

PLAID FAVORED IN CHARITY TILT TODAY

dreams realized today as the ambitious Bluffites battle the colorful Skibos, only death or disaster will keep them away.

STIRRING SPECTACLE

The response with which Pittsburgh has met the appeal for aid for the unfortunate has been warming. The city has gone for this game in a purposeful way. The game is a sure-fire success from a financial standpoint, and from a football angle promises to be as thrilling and stirring a spectacle as has been offered here all season.

Both the Carnegie and Duquesne bands will be on hand. Arrangements also have been made to have Pitt's music-makers present and the Pitt student body will occupy a special cheering section.

Practically every high school and parochial school in the district will be on hand. South Hills, of Pittsburgh, heads the list, having purchased a block of 600 seats. Disabled veterans of the World War will be on hand, their seats having been bought for them by the Pittsburgh Chapter of the Baseball Writers' Association of America, the Pittsburgh Press Club and Dean Charles C. Leeds, of the Carnegie Tech School of Industries.

All manner of business houses have purchased blocks of seats. Men prominent in civic and business circles in Pittsburgh have made reservations. Society will be represented in the boxes and stands.

TARTANS FAVORED

But what about the game itself? Carnegie rules a favorite, although the Plaid record for the season hardly is more impressive than that boasted by the Dukes. The Tartans have been beaten by Pitt, by Notre Dame, Wash-Jeff, Purdue and New York University. Victories have been recorded over Temple, Georgia Tech and the University of Buffalo.

The Dukes held Western Maryland and Georgetown to scoreless ties, defeated North Dakota, Oglethorpe, Geneva and lost to West Virginia, West Virginia Wesleyan, Holy Cross, Catholic University and Howard.

Neither eleven is much of a scoring shot. The Tartans have totaled just 82 points to date, against 76 for their opponents; the Dukes have garnered 82 points against 85.

Oddly enough, it remained for both teams to crack the victory strings of unbeaten teams. Tech took Temple, just when the Owls were looking forward to a campaign without a defeat, and the Dukes sliced the string of wins North Dakota was so proudly compiling.

TEAMS WEAKENED

The rival varsities completed their drills for the battle with tapering off sessions yesterday. Ill luck cut into the backfield strength of both teams late in the week. Tech lost its reserve quarterback, Angie Bevevino, who was called to the beside of his father, when the latter was shot while deer hunting, and Ben Pawlina, Duquesne's right halfback, was taken ill Thursday and hardly will be able to get into the action today.

The Carnegie forward wall will have Stewart and Ostrosky at the ends, Don Fletcher and Forsman at the tackles, Hooks Sample and Tony Kebe at the guards and the veteran Alex Ducanis at center.

In the backfield, Stu Dueger will run the team at quarterback, Capt. Armentrout and Kavel are set for heavy going at the halves, and Buck Ewing is to start at fullback. Of this list, Armentrout, Kebe, Ducanis, Fletcher and

MID-WEST LEADS NATION ON A. P. ALL-AMERICA

IRISH PLAYERS WIN THREE POSITIONS

By ALAN GOULD
Associated Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—As the smoke from the barrage of All-America ballots cleared away today, the great Mid-West emerged with a clear-cut advantage over all rival sections on the football battlefields.

Repeating their conquests of 1930, the outstanding stars of the American midlands carried off six of the 11 positions on the All-America consensus compiled by The Associated Press from the ballots of sports writers and editors in all parts of the country.

The South and Far West (each of which disputes the mid-West's claims to team supremacy) gained two position apiece. The lone Eastern representative on the team is William Barry Wood Jr., Harvard's captain and the outstanding choice of the nation for quarterback role occupied for the previous two years by Frank Carideo of Notre Dame.

SCHWARTZ REPEATS HONOR

Notre Dame, with three places, and Northwestern, with two, duplicate their achievements in the 1930 Associated Press balloting. The all-star representatives of the Fighting Irish are Marchmont Schwartz in the backfield, Capt. Tom Yarr at center and Frank Hoffman at guard. Northwestern placed Pug Rentner among the ball carriers, and Dallas Marsh at tackle. The sixth mid-western honor man is Minnesota's 212-pound captain, Clarence Munn.

The South furnishes the two All-America ends in Capt. Gerald Dalrymple, of Tulane, and Vernon (Catfish) Smith, Georgia's colorful performer.

The Far West's contributions to the first team are Ernie Pinckert, star blocking back of the University of Southern California, and Paul Schwegler, great tackle of the University of Washington.

DALRYMPLE SECOND IN VOTES

The results of the Associated Press balloting in the seventh annual consensus since Walter Camp's death indicate striking support for several of the choices. Schwartz was voted the year's outstanding back, with 255 votes out of a possible 270.

Dalrymple was not far behind in total votes, with 225, and Munn, with 201, rated as the outstanding lineman. Rentner, with 211 votes, and Wood, with 218, also were overwhelming favorites.

Leadership of the Mid-West was maintained in the selection of second and third All-America teams. Of the total of 33 players placed, 14 go to the Mid-West, eight to the East, five to the South, five to the Far West, and one to the Southwest.

Last year the Mid-West led with 11, while the Far West gained nine places, the East eight, and the South four and Southwest one.

PINCKERT BY A NOSE

The principal contests in the 1931 balloting involved the fourth backfield position and the second tackle job. Pinckert, the only repeater besides Schwartz, needed strong closing support to stiff-arm such fine rivals as Gene McAvoy of Tennessee, Don Zimmerman of Tulane and Burt Viviano, of Cornell, for the post of honor with Wood, Schwartz and Rentner.

Not far behind these performers in the roundup of ballots were Bill Morton, of Dartmouth, the second team choice for quarterback; Carl Cramer, Ohio State's flashy sophomore; Orville Mohler, of Southern California; Weldon (Speedy) Mason, of Southern Methodist, and Albie Booth, of Yale. All of these stars played on the all-American squad.

PLAID FAVORED IN RELIEF TILT

Evans complete their varsity careers with today's game.

Coach Elmer Layden will not make up his mind on a starting lineup until game time, but has indicated that he'll have Baker and Abele at the ends, Venneri and O'Donnell at the tackles, Capt. Mike Ferrera and Amman at the guards, Cercone at center, and Devenney, Chako DeLuca and Siegel in the backfield. Chacko is expected to start in the place of the ailing Pawlina, although a seventh hour decision may result in Nusbaum's starting.

MAY USE AIR ATTACK

If Zaninelli has an "on" day the Dukes may count on at least an even break and perhaps the edge in the kicking. Armentrout will do the booting for Tech. If Army is taken out, his understudy speedy Johnny Graveno, of Cleveland, will handle the Tech punting game.

The contest may develop into a test of aerial games. The Dukes' forward passing attack has stood them in swell stead this year while Carnegie's heaving has been much more potent than the running attack. A wet field and a correspondingly wet ball, however, will effect the passing situation no little.

On the sidelines will be two of the casualties of the local season. In a wheel chair, near the Tech bench, will be Lib Lewis, brilliant Carnegie end, who suffered a broken leg in the Notre Dame game, and Mike Milligan, Pitt guard, who suffered a hip injury in the Nebraska tussle, will be discharged from the hospital in time to attend the struggle.

And a struggle it promises to be, hard fought from kickoff to final gun. A struggle as brilliant as it is worthy—and it is plenty of the latter.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 5 (AP).—Notre Dame University's football team will play the United States Naval Academy in the Cleveland Municipal Stadium November 19, 1932, George H. Bender, Stadium manager, was notified by Notre Dame officials last night.

SQUASH LEAGUE PLAY UNDER WAY TODAY

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Class A stars of the Pittsburgh Squash Racquets Association inter-club loop will inaugurate 1931-1932 campaign hostilities this afternoon. Two contests grace the lid-lift card, the champion P. A. A. aggregation of Peree Siverd invading Sewickley Heights for a clash with Dave Gilmore's Allegheny Country Club crew, and the rehabilitated and altogether powerful University Club contingent moves in on the Keystone A. C. performers, proteges of Mentor Ben Pope, runner-up to the world's professional crown. McCook Reed's Pittsburgh Golf Club quintet will not get under way till next Saturday.

P. A. A. weakened by loss of Scotty Burke, Col. A. J. Gidney, and Alf Hamilton, will enter battle with Capt. Siverd at number one and Dr. Dave O'Loughlin, tennis flash, at number two. The remainder of the squad will be chosen from among Capt. F. A. McMahon, Army smasher; Dr. George Stegeman, Jack Evans, Jack Lauler, and F. S. Hastings. Gilmore tops the A. C. C. list. His tilt with Siverd should prove the classic of the day. Alex Robinson, Stan Quay, Rush, and Livingstone will round out the Sewickley delegation.

University Club, featuring Frank McClintock, Frank White, Alf Hamilton and Charley Fagan, probably flashes the most imposing lineup on the circuit. Scotty Burke heads the Keystone outfit, with Bill Bickel, Don McCutcheon, Herb Lytle and Chip Kennedy following in the order named. The McClintock-Burke affair is apt to prove second only to the Siverd-Gilmore combat in heat and general interest.

Geneva Eleven Dropped by Bisons

LEWISBURG, Pa., Dec. 5 (AP).—Gettysburg and Geneva have been dropped from the 1932 Bucknell football schedule, Graduate Manager D. W. Griffith has announced. September 23, (night), St. Thomas, home; September 30, (night), Albright, home; October 8, Fordham, away; October 14, (night), Temple, away; October 22, Lafayette, home; October 29, Villanova, away; November 5, Western Maryland, home; November 12, W. and J., away; November 19, Georgetown, away).

Daughter Presented McKechnie Family

Mr. and Mrs. William B. McKechnie, of Wilkinsburg, were the proud parents of a new seven pound, one ounce baby daughter, presented Mrs. McKechnie in the Pittsburgh Hospital at 7:10 last evening.

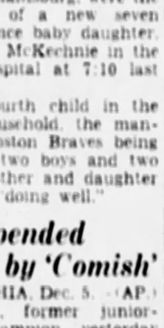
Eddie Hirshberg In Press Box For Sun-Tele

When Carnegie Tech and Duquesne University line up for the kickoff in their big charity football game at the Stadium this afternoon, Eddie Hirshberg, captain and star end of the crack University of Pittsburgh eleven, will be in the press box as a reporter for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.



Eddie Hirshberg

Eddie is a student in the School of Journalism at the university, and a regular contributor to the Pitt Weekly and the Pitt Panther. He is a clever writer of both prose and poetry and will be making his debut as a writer for a large metropolitan daily newspaper.

Read his interesting comments on the play of the two teams.

Harry Keck, sports editor; Jess Carver, football expert, and Charles J. Doyle also will cover the game for the readers of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. Howard Harpster, Geneva College coach and all-America quarterback at Carnegie Tech in 1928 and since then a regular contributor of football articles to these columns, will review the game in Monday's issue.

Long's Sport Comment

fault with the spectator who, he said, considers he knows more about the game than the players.

THE GROWTH OF football and of public interest in recent years was attributed by the Harvard star to the radio and increased means of transportation. He said that while the press was often criticized because of football bally-hoo it was only meeting the readers' demands.

Referring to the charge that football gave players a false idea of their own importance, Wood said that when a player gets into the business world he quickly realizes he is "just one of the mob."

WITH THE SCENE of the off-season baseball doings shifting from West Baden to Chicago, there will be a quickening of interest among the fans in the possibility of some player deals being consummated. The attention of Pirate followers, naturally, will be centered on the movements of Manager George Gibson as he attempts to swing trades for a few of his players. The Buccaneers on the block are Outfielder Adam Comorosky, Infielder George Grantham and Pitcher Steve Swetonic. Other clubs are known to have shown an interest already in Comorosky, at least. Max Carey, Brooklyn pilot, for one, makes no secret of the fact that he would like to get the Polish Express. He says he will try to acquire Comorosky or Taylor Douthit for his outfield and Ed Brandt for his pitching staff. Carey is believed to have talked over the Comorosky matter with Gibson already, but the new Pirate skipper, of course, will take no action until he has learned what he can get from other clubs.

W. WARREN BARBOUR, appointed United States Senator from New Jersey, is not only a former amateur champion heavyweight boxer of America, but had another notable connection with the glove game as a member of the Army, Navy and Civilian Boxing Board and as official timekeeper of the Jess Willard-Jack Dempsey world title fight in Toledo, O., on July 4, 1919.

And the timekeeper's part on that occasion was a far more prominent one than it usually is, even in a world championship battle. All because of the confusion and numerous arguments that resulted when the late Tex Richard made the most glaring mistake of his career as a promoter by putting a five-cent bell in a $50,000 arena.

THAT THE SOUND of the tiny tinkler couldn't be heard by the men in the ring became evident right off the bat. Dempsey and Willard didn't respond, but remained in their corners until they heard Referee Ollie Pecord order Barbour to ring the bell again for the start of the fight.

When Willard was knocked down for the seventh time near the close of the first round, it was thought he had been counted out. Dempsey jumped out of the ring and started for his dressing room, thinking he had won. But it developed that Barbour had rung the joke bell ending the round before Pecord completed the count of 10.

W. Warren Barbour

LATER, AFTER WILLARD had refused to come up for the fourth round, making Dempsey the winner, it required a decision by Barbour to settle a controversy as to whether the fight had ended in the third or fourth frame. Referee Pecord ruled that Dempsey had won in the third round because there had been no fourth, but his reason for calling it a three-round fight did not satisfy a large number of critics and bettors. They insisted it had been a fourth round knockout because they believed Willard had not quit until after the bell had rung for the beginning of that stanza, and the dispute continued until the timekeeper gave an official ruling. Barbour declared he had not rung the bell when one of Willard's handlers threw a towel into the ring, and that according to the official watch 13 seconds of the regulation one-minute rest period between rounds remained to elapse. On the strength of that statement the knockout was officially recorded as having occurred in the third round, settling all arguments and deciding many wagers.

YOU MAY ALWAYS look for a novelty at an Amen Corner dinner, and the one tonight, with the coaches and managers of the three local college football teams and also some visiting gridiron notables as hono. guests, will be no exception.

Instead of giving straightaway talks, as is the custom at dinners, the football celebrities called upon to speak will be interviewed by newspaper men in regular press style.

JACK E. KENNARD

FORMER STAR COMES HERE

The Keystone A. C. has a new athletic director, Jack E. Kennard, formerly of Detroit. He succeeds Harry Hainsworth, who has been made assistant manager of the club.

Kennard comes here with a fine record of achievement as an athlete and athletic instructor.

He has been athletic director of the Cadillac A. C., of Detroit, the past four years and before that for four years was in charge of athletics for the General Motors Corporation.

Kennard starred in football and track at a Detroit high school and then attended the University of Michigan and University of Chicago, where he earned his spurs as a basketball, track and tennis player.

RUDOLPH, CUE CHAMP, WINS

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—Erwin Rudolph, of Cleveland, defending champion, and George Kelly, of Philadelphia, won their matches in the world pocket billiard championships last night.

Rudolph defeated Robert Lindblom, of Seattle, 125 to 62, in 13 innings, while Kelly downed Marcel Camp, Detroit, 125 to 102, in 17 innings.

Spencer Livsey, of Los Angeles, set down Frank Taberski, Schenectady, N. Y., former champion, 125 to 40, in 13 innings, while Andrew Ponzi, Philadelphia, had little trouble defeating Johnny Layton, another former champ, of Sedalia, Mo., 125 to 43, in nine innings.

GAMES TONIGHT
Pittsburgh at Buffalo.
Windsor at Cleveland.

BUFFALO, Dec. 5. A hockey game that looms as the most attractive and most important that the International League season thus far has offered will be staged at the Bisons' Fort Erie, Ont., rink tonight when Pittsburgh's second-place Yellow Jackets meet Buffalo's first-place Bisons.

The invaders will be out to defend several early-season records, and to claim a half-interest in the league lead, now held by the locals by the margin of one game. Albie Cox, Pittsburgh goalie, has not permitted an enemy tally in three games and is eager to extend this record, and he and his mates are anxious to add to a success string that stands at three wins and two ties.

BEATEN ONLY ONCE

The Yellow Jackets' only defeat was handed 'em by Buffalo in an overtime battle in a dense fog at Pittsburgh on November 19. The Bisons, too, have lost only one game, to Cleveland, but the Steel City skaters have had fewer goals scored against them than any other aggregation.

The members of both teams are in top condition, and everything points to a hard, even battle. The heavy advance ticket sale guarantees a capacity crowd for the engagement. The probable lineup:

Buffalo		Pittsburgh
Thacker	G.	Cox
Lesterman	D.	Fraser
Murray	D.	Herbert
Voss	C.	Hudden
Martin	W.	Arbour
Gross	W.	Ingram

Subs—Buffalo: Main, Jackson, Rioch, Goslin, Lauder, Gauthier. Pittsburgh: Gregg, Hallida, Miller, Fields, Mafle, White, Proudlock.

It was agreed upon to drop the University of Illinois relay carnival and the Ohio State outdoor relays for one year.

Opinions Differ on Question Of Working Wives

Should married femmes work? That question is good for a riot in any company and Ellen Tree aimed to start one, when she sprang it on us not long ago.

Her answer was "No!" According to her, any lady who acquired a wedding ring should do a dive for home and fireside, pronto, and "let the single girls have a chance."

And did the rest of the female population rise to broadcast their slant on this question? They did—and how! We'll let W. M. L. speak her piece first.

"If there were plenty of work to go around," says she, "then it would be all right for anyone to work who wanted to. And of course it's okay if a woman's husband is sick, or makes so small a salary it's hard to exist on it.

DIFFERENT OPINIONS

"But—and this is the core, to my way of thinking, to everything that's rotten — those women who have husbands who hold good positions, and who themselves hold down a position when there is no need for them to, keeping out the single woman, the needy—nothing is too awful to call them!

"If I were an employer and knew a woman was married, I would find out whether she needed the job, or was just holding it down because she wanted to, and if she wasn't in need—bang! Out she would go! I honestly think any woman who is working when she doesn't have to is a cheat!"

Maybe you'll agree with her. But T. E. D. doesn't. And you'll probably be surprised when you get an earful of her ideas.

"Why deprive women of jobs," she asks, "just because they may have other means of support?

"There are a good many men who are holding well-paid positions—men who are financially independent and don't need those positions at all. Yet no one seems to question their right to work.

MANY NEED MONEY

"There seems to be a widespread idea that if all married women would stay at home (where they belong, some put it), we would have no depression, and there would be jobs for everyone; what a pitifully stupid idea! And why be so unfair to women? A married woman has as much right to be self-supporting as anyone, and many of them need the money they earn.

"Then, don't plenty of single girls have homes, and relatives, who can take care of them if they need it? And what has marriage to do with whether a woman has a right to work or not, anyway?"

What's your answer to that, stranger? Would you fire all the men who have money enough to live without working, as well as the married women? If not, why not? Isn't it just as fair? It's something to think about, anyway.

And now here's Rita S. Wood, with another notion.

"Women have come to be a regular part of business life," she begins. "I think everyone admits that. It isn't just a question of women depending on the business world for temporary support, until they marry. The reverse is true: the business world has come to depend on women. Clever, well-trained, reliable business women are needed as much as well-trained business men.

HELPING CIVILIZATION

"And no worker can become well-trained in a year or two. It takes a woman just as long to acquire business training as a man. She must go on working after her girlhood has passed—after she is married—if she is to amount to something.

"If all women had to stop work when they married, the world would lose many of its most efficient and intelligent workers.

"I know that some people will yell in horror when I say that many women can perform a much greater service for their country by going on with business careers than by dropping out and confining themselves to housework; but it's true.

"Business women, married or single, are pushing civilization ahead. We'll have a worse depression than we have now, if all the older women are taken out of the business ranks."

And if that doesn't start a whole bunch of battles, I'll quit my own job and take up fancy work, instead.

"DO YOUR CHRISTMAS SHOPPING EARLY" -:- -:- Drawn by Nell Brinkley

Slowly, in this year of Nineteen-Thirty-One, that has been strangely hard for some, the Christmas Time has approached. Months ago, just as pictures and stories have told us year after year, reminded us to "do our Christmas shopping early," the knights of the pen did it this year. It seems early even now to remind you. But you girls know how it is. Every year of a lady's life, she swears to shop more wisely the next year—but chiefly—to do it SOONER. I have promised myself for 10 years, after the ordeal of present-hunting was over, and I had found it not so terrible after all (as when we take an anesthetic, or dive from a spring-board the first time), that the day after New Year I would begin my next Christmas' shopping. The day after New Year!

This year there is added to the call to action another sentence. Not only are you told to do it early—but just to "do your Christmas shopping!" Those who have money to spare at all, will do it, as they have always done when the time that paints in everyone's minds a certain picture, comes 'round. Bells, holly, scarlet ribbon, the green tree with the sparkle and glitter, the tinsel, the presents, the dinner with faces we care for at the table, the best silver, the child or the children "at home," and snow—(perhaps, we hope so, you betcha!), the yellow-lighted streets where the past ages persist and we still feel the old-fashioned town-architecture in spite of the loom of the modern starscraper! These things are a flock of insistent spirits that overrun the world when Christmas comes along—and the world begins to feel like a person on a Christmas-card, and goes forth to hunt down presents.

The merchant need not worry—the world will shop.
But do it early, people. NELL BRINKLEY.

Doubling Bids of Two Suits

Every player has at some time held a big hand that appeared to offer excellent chances for game at his best suit, only to hear an adversary make an opening bid of the suit that appeared so promising. A held the first hand shown below, and had intended bidding 2-spades. To his surprise Z made an opening bid of 1-spade on the second hand shown. What was the best course for A to follow?

♠A Q-10-7-3 ♥6-4 ♣A Q-7 ♦A-J-5
♠K-J-9-8-6 ♥A-10-8 ♣9-5 ♦K-Q-2

A could not pass spades because he liked the make, and then double the threatened shift of make without confusing his partner. He made an informatory double, intending to bid no-trumps in case his partner responded with hearts, or to assist his partner's response in either diamonds or clubs. It would not have been wise to have bid no-trumps without knowing who held the hearts, as he might have a long heart suit opened against him and suffer needlessly.

Having doubled spades A could double a shift of make in hearts, to force B to take some action (bid diamonds or clubs; let the double heart stand for a penalty, in case B could defeat that declaration; or have B bid no-trumps if holding two stoppers in hearts and lacking a sound suit bid).

An informatory double of each of two suits shows that the doubler is strong in the suit first doubled and weak in the second suit. The logic given below is too plain to need lengthy explanation.

If a player makes an informatory double of one suit, and then fails to also double the second suit bid, he states that he is weak in the first suit doubled and that he is strong enough in the suit that he has not doubled to remain satisfied to let the second declaration be played. Being satisfied with the second suit it would be stupid to double the declaration and permit opponents to shift back to the suit in which he is very weak.

Never make an informatory double with a two-suiter; first bid one suit and then bid the other long suit. An informatory double states that you do not hold a strong two-suiter. Only when you hold considerable strength in the third suit may you double with a two-suiter. You may double 1-heart with the first hand shown below, but the second hand calls for a bid of 1-spade over 1-club, and then for 2-hearts either over 2-clubs or 2-diamonds; should apponents shift to hearts, of course you should pass.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Evening Refreshments

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I would like your advice on the matter of light refreshments to be served in the evening when callers drop in. I mean just for a bite or "snack" as we call it.

1. Should coffee or tea be the beverage? Of course, cold drinks could be served in hot weather. Then are cake and cookies enough to go with it?

2. At what time is it best to have these refreshments?

MRS. C.

1. There should always, in cool months, be a hot drink served with the "snack," no matter how slight the menu. Coffee is the usual one to serve, for practically everyone likes it. And tea is more associated with an afternoon serving of refreshments.

The wise hostess these days serves both coffee and a coffee "substitute" for the guests who find that coffee interferes with their sleep. I strongly recommend this service...it's kind, and thoughtful, and many people (myself included) are grateful to hostesses who plan in this way. Hot chocolate, in very cold weather, is a good alternative for coffee.

It is a good plan, if you have time to make a special plan for your menu, to have a "bread course," that is some sandwiches, or cheese toasted on crackers, or something of this kind, and then the cake course. But cake and coffee, or small cakes and coffee, are not to be scorned!

2. Ten o'clock is a good time, but really any time is correct, since it depends on the other plans for the evening.

Should She Marry Him?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

You have no idea how I enjoy reading the explanations you give people. It is really an education, and I cut all your columns from the paper and keep them in a box.

Is it proper to marry a divorced man?

He has not been living with his wife for 30 years and now he thinks a great deal of my sister. In fact, he loves her. So please tell me as soon as it is convenient for you.

Devoted Reader.

Thank you for these kind words, and for telling me about your use of the column. Maybe you don't think I'm proud.

Now about your sister's marriage; unless the denomination of the church to which your sister belongs forbids such a marriage, it is proper for her to marry a divorced man. Apparently he isn't going into a second lightly, since he has waited 30 years to try again for happiness.

Household Hints

The hostess who knows will serve daintily tinted sugar in colors corresponding with her decorative scheme when serving tea.

When replacing rugs that have been taken up for cleaning, apply to their backs nonskid materials prepared to keep them from slipping. Accidents from sliding rugs outnumber all other kinds of home accidents, according to statistics.

Keep small packets of lavender among your bed linens—it bids one such a fragrant "bon voyage" when one sails for dreamland.

Orange juice as a substitute for vinegar will give a new and deliciously piquant flavor to French dressing. Select the thin-skinned yellow oranges when, as here, the amount of juice is the first consideration. These are always the juicier.

Dicky Asks Lillian to Act as Peacemaker

Lillian gave a delighted chuckle as I said that "for all the money in the world" I would not open the telegram, which I had torn across and thrust into Dicky's hands after his sneer concerning it. The sheer amusement in the sound made me flush with the realization of my own silliness. But I did not take back the ultimatum.

"I'm not asking you to open it, 'Mule-ette,'" Lillian said. "And don't you dare have me arrested for interfering with your private wires. But when Dicky, with the torn pieces of the telegram in his trembling hands and the tears dripping from his once merry blue eyes, begged me to tell him what in the name of heaven and the reverse was to be done, I took pity on the lad, and said, 'Leave it to me,' or words to that effect. Then I tucked him into bed with an ice pack at his head and a hot water bottle at his feet—fearing a nervous collapse—and taking the torn telegram, I carefully opened it, pasted the pieces together and salvaged every word. I even went so far as to read the darned thing, hoping I could forge your name to a reply, so I wouldn't have to disturb you until you got over your first attack of temperamental authorship. You're beginning well, old dear. Not the most accomplished of movie stars—or stallers—could have staged a more effective stunt. It was a good idea too, to practice on Dicky. Phil Veritzen is used to temperamental stars and playwrights. He eats 'em alive. But after this stunt of yours, I'm beginning to hope he'll find you indigestible. Now, if you——"

She paused for breath, and I put up both hands in token of surrender. From my long experience of her little ways I knew that she was perfectly capable of keeping on with her nonsensical monologue indefinitely until she should reduce me to helpless laughter.

"If you'll only shut up, I'll do anything," I said pettishly.

She looked at me reflectively.

"You impose hard terms, lady," she said. "But I'll be game. Here!" She thrust the pasted telegram into my hand and walked toward the door. But I called her back imperatively.

"Don't you dare go away," I said. "You say you've read it. What's it about, the play?"

"And how!" she said, flippantly. "Better take a whiff of smelling salts before you read it. You'll need 'em."

There was that in her tone which told me that she considered the message an important one, and I lifted the pasted paper with misgivings.

"If last two acts satisfactory," I read, "wish to put your play in rehearsal shortly. On way back to New York. Plan reach there Thursday. Coming directly your home with Noel for final reading of play. If not finished, please estimate how long it will take you to finish it and wire me reply this address. Leaving here tonight. Wish to know before leaving. Best personal regards. Philip Veritzen."

I read it through twice with mounting panic, and, dropping it into my lap, looked over at Lillian.

"Reach here Thursday," I said. "Why! That's——"

"Tomorrow," Lillian finished, crisply, for me. "Exactly. He will land in our midst tomorrow with both feet, and heaven help the poor sailors who haven't manned the halyards, or whatever it is they man."

"But"—I picked up the telegram and held it out—"this says——" I broke off and looked at her smiling, apparently unconcerned face with resentment. "Don't you realize?" I demanded pettishly—but she did not permit me to finish.

"You're holding that thing exactly as if it were a smallpox placard," she said. "Put it down, or give it to me. I'm not afraid of contagion."

She took it from my hands and, spreading it out, read it over, then looked over at me with a provoking smile.

"Well! Have you 'estimated' yet?" she asked.

"Estimated!" I said, dolefully. "You know I haven't written a line of either the third or fourth act. How can I 'estimate'? I don't know whether they will take me three months or three years."

"You mean three days or three weeks," she retorted, and something in her tone terrified me.

"Lillian!" I gasped.

"Well!" she grudgingly conceded, "we'll say three weeks. That's what you'd better wire him. Thanks for putting the number three into my head. I should have said two or four if left to myself."

"But I never can——"

"Of course you can't," cheerfully, "but you can 'estimate' can't you? And you've a general plan of those two last acts in your head. I've heard you outline 'em myself."

"Ye-es," I admitted, "but——"

"Save me that word, please," she said, impatiently. "What you've got to do tonight and tomorrow morning is to dictate a lot of conversation—it's lucky you've slept all day and Katrina and I'll take turns typing. If you do it hot off the griddle you'll be able to make good on the telegram you're writing old Phil during the next five minutes."

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Sudden Chest Pain May Be Symptom of Pleurisy

Pleurisy is a disease that makes its attack without warning. It comes like a thief in the night. The sufferer is taken ill so suddenly that nothing can be done to prevent it.

Dr. Copeland

Sudden pain in the chest should never be overlooked. When the pain is made worse by taking a breath, pleurisy should be suspected. If these signs are present and, in addition, there is fever, a physician should be called.

The symptoms may resemble pleurisy and yet not be pleurisy, of course. But it is wiser that a physician examine the patient and definitely determine the state of affairs. This is important, because neglected pleurisy may become chronic and serious.

Some authorities believe that neglected pleurisy often leads to tuberculosis. Others believe that many a case of pleurisy must be regarded as a sign of tuberculosis already contracted.

Pleurisy often occurs before an attack of pneumonia. It may also follow pneumonia. In any event, well planned supervision is required.

There are different forms of pleurisy, each one being treated in a different way. In early cases of pleurisy, where the pain is excessive and breathing is painful, strapping of the chest is helpful. The strapping is done by means of adhesive plaster in such a way that the chest wall is kept rigid. The adhesive plaster is applied tightly after expelling the air from the lungs. The tight application controls the chest movements in breathing and in this way lessens the pain.

When the disease takes the form of a "dry pleurisy," in which there is no fluid in the lung cavity, the treatment is simple, hardly more than rest in bed. It is a different matter when the fluid has accumulated in the chest—a condition spoken of as "pleurisy with effusion." In that case it may be necessary to tap the chest wall. This is a much simpler procedure than it sounds. It may be done without moving the patient to the hospital.

One who has had an attack of pleurisy is susceptible to further attacks. For this reason extra precautions should be exercised.

Elderly people require careful nursing and rest in bed when suffering from pleurisy. The heart should be watched carefully.

Pleurisy may be confused with a pain caused by an inflammation of the nerves running between the ribs. This condition is spoken of as "intercostal neuralgia," the name describing an irritation of the nerves between the ribs. This causes pain quite similar to that found in pleurisy.

In pleurisy the pain is always made worse by deep breathing. Of course, it is less when shallow breathing is practiced. It may be relieved by lying on the affected side.

When shampooing excessively oily hair, use a cupful of thick rich suds (let a small piece of soap stand in a cupful of hot water over night) and add a tiny pinch of baking soda. Soda cuts away oil, makes the shampoo more thorough.

Crepe georgette is a flattering fabric for the lady of weight, gives her a more slender appearance. Satin she should avoid, and velvets add to body spread. Materials of large figures are not for her; plain materials are safer. So are dark colors.

Pint-sized gals and gals who are overweight must make it a point to stand tall, keep the backbone stretched. QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 20 years, and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, just a healing, soothing vegetable laxative, safe and pleasant.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They help cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling — sick headache — torpid liver—constipation, you should find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets.

Thousands take them every night to keep right. Try them. 15c, 30c, 60c.

2 CITY BUREAUS SHELVED IN BUDGET CUT

Council Economy Strikes Welfare Units, Acts to Skeletonize Transit Body

Two divisions of the Department of Public Welfare—the Bureau for the Handicapped and the Mental Health Clinic—were pushed into oblivion late yesterday by Council's budget committee.

At the same time Council took action to place the City Transit Commission on a skeleton basis with only one office clerk during 1932.

There are three persons employed in the Mental Health Clinic headed by Dr. E. P. Mayer psychiatrist. The Bureau for the Handicapped has four employes with an annual payroll of $8,364, while that of the Mental Health Clinic is $7,860. Total expenses for the Mental Health Clinic are $7,855. The Bureau for the Handicapped appropriation request was $8,564.

41 TO LOSE JOBS

Forty-one employes of the Department of City Transit are to be affected by Council's action in placing the Commission office on a skeletonized program. The department's annual payroll is $27,280. Winters Haydock, chief engineer, whose salary is expected to be lopped off for one year at least, receives $10,000 annually. Council, in taking the action, moved that if the subway program is carried through in 1933 the personnel would be re-hired.

During the budget session yesterday Controller James P. Kerr informed Council he had sliced the sinking fund account from $3,392,984 to $3,053,100, a saving of $339,875. The interest and state tax on loans was reduced by Kerr from $2,752,112 to $2,742,856, a saving of more than $9,000.

FARM REQUEST APPROVED

Appropriations at the Municipal Hospital and the Leech Farm Tuberculosis Sanitarium were approved without change.

Appropriations for the Bureau of Child Welfare, Bureau of Sanitation and Bureau of Smoke Regulation received like treatment.

Requests for funds in the Division of Dairy Inspection were held up by Council pending a report from Dr. Charles B. Maits, health director, relative to a change in the system of inspection. On motion of Councilman Robert Garland, Maits was ordered to have his operatives inspect milk at the depots when received here, instead of sending them to dairies throughout the tri-state district for this purpose. Council believes a considerable saving can be made by this change.

Action on the budget will be resumed Monday, according to Chairman W. Y. English, of the buget committee. Several days will elapse, he said, before the 1932 tax millage can be determined.

Washington Stamp Plan Under Inquiry

THUGS HOLD UP GAS STATION, STREET CAR

Highwayman Robs Woman, Threatens Three Men Who Attempt Rescue

Police and county detectives today were searching for four men who held up a Glassport street car late last night, and a gunman who robbed a gasoline station at Bigelow boulevard and Strawberry way at 5 a. m. today.

Waiting at the end of the car line while a Glassport-McKeesport trolley was making its final run, shortly after midnight, two armed men boarded the car at High street and Wall avenue, Glassport, and held up the motorman, William A. Biddle, 40, of 303 Ruben Building, McKeesport, robbed him of $45, his money changer and passes, and escaped, according to police. Two passengers on the car were unmolested.

According to police, the robbers were accompanied by two other men, one of whom pulled the trolley pole from the wire during the holdup while the other waited in a nearby automobile, in which the four escaped.

An armed man forced his way into an Atlantic gasoline station at Bigelow boulevard and Strawberry way, cut the telephone wires and robbed James Stilley, of 544 Bellefield avenue, a Pitt student and the night attendant, of $75.

A Negro held up and robbed Martha Garrick, of 601 Martindale street. He held at bay three men who attempted to aid her.

The men, whose names were not learned, saw the robbery and slowed their automobile, but continued on their way when the Negro threatened them with a gun.

Laurel's Mother Arranges For a Secret Meeting With Spaniard

CHAPTER XIV.

Laurel felt faint. She poured herself a glass of ginger ale, and drank it.

"Say, don't you want a kick in that?"

"No. I've got enough from the torrid folk right here. Some hip-grinders!"

"I can dance as well as any of 'em. You watch me strut my stuff," challenged Imogen.

They pulled her down when she made as though to rise from her chair and give a solo performance.

Say, Mr. Schumph, I don't want these beastly eggs and bacon."

"Eat them. They'll do you good."

"No. I'm thirsty. Give me that bottle again."

There appeared to be no stopping Imogen.

She got up and danced with Schumph on the floor that was scarcely bigger than a handkerchief.

But—like all the others—instead of moving round, they would undulate in the most absurd manner.

"Schumph seems to be getting a big kick out of it," whispered Freddie to Laurel.

"I think we ought to be going now," suggested Laurel, nervously.

"Heavens! what's come over the child," demanded Freddie. "Have you taken to religion?"

"Hedonism."

"Well! The grand word! What's it mean?"

"That we're all seeking happiness . . . only maybe we're looking for it in strange places . . ."

"Gosh! the child thinks! The old brain-pan is working!"

"Hedonism," said Laurel slowly, lingering on the word for she was rather tight, "hedonism . . . and the 'black bottom' . . ."

"Well, these darkeys are happy enough. What are you grousing about?"

"Freddie, do you ever use your mind at all? D'you think it's really better to be a satisfied swine than a . . . a dissatisfied Socrates?"

STAYS WITH IMOGEN

"Great guns! since we've all been splashing round a tub why don't you say Diogenes?"

"Well, it makes me sick . . . this noise and heat and smell . . . ouch!" putting her hands to her ears at a particularly shrill scream of the saxophone. "d'they call that MUSIC?"

"C'mon—since you're so fed up, we'll beat it."

"Where to?"

"I'll get the car and we'll hit it up in the pure sweet country air, since you've grown so goody."

"And leave Im?"

"She's okay with her new 'Sugar.'"

"She's not. She's lit to the eyes. I'm going to stay right by her."

"Great little champion, Laurel!"

"Say, Freddie, I feel queer. I think I'll have a drink before Im comes back. Maybe that'll pull me together."

He put his hand below the table and lifted the flask which had replenished at Timmy Tewson's.

It was empty for the second time. He grimaced apologetically to Laurel.

"Say, I'll bribe one of those side-walking waiters and he'll bring something with a kick in it or you . . ."

And presently a glass that smelled like Scotch was placed in front of Laurel.

She drank half of it. Didn't like the taste. Somehow it made her feel dizzier . . .

When Imogen and her newfound friend returned, Laurel muttered: "I can't stand this heat. Let's get out in the air."

"Let's go back to Timmy's roof and make it up with him," suggested the other girl.

"No. We'll go home—"

"Not I," chanted the siren, who had been making great headway with her new admirer.

Mr. Schumph paid the check with a handsome tip. One of the gyrating waiters got a taxicab for them.

RETURN TO TIMMY'S

But when they reached the entrance of the apartment building Sammy Schumph declined to come up.

He'd important business in the morning. Must grab a little sleep, he said. He adjured Imogen to be sure and give him a ring . . . and if she were in town tomorrow would she lunch with him?

She would. And HOW! she exclaimed excitedly. With his check for $500 thrust in the top of her long stocking, she was ready for anything.

He wrote his 'phone number on a scrap of paper and gave it to her, though she declared she remembered it perfectly.

Confusedly, and with the feeling of dizziness growing worse and worse, Laurel followed Freddie and Imogen into the elevator.

To lie down . . . SLEEP . . . the whole place seemed whirling about her . . .

Had dope been put in that last drink of hers?

They gained the roof-apartment. Some of the guests were still there . . .

She heard Timmy Tewson's voice from very far away. Then her legs seemed to sink under her, like cotton-wool . . . came an interval of oblivion . . . then the feel of ice on her forehead.

Was that Imogen's voice? She was asleep now . . . dreaming strange, terrifying dreams in a black forest . . .

JUNGLE it was! And there were wailing wahoos, and surging bodies about her . . .

Laurel awoke. She was lying on something soft . . . . . was it a bed? Somebody breathed beside her . . . . . .

She sat up, opened her eyes—but the darkness was thicker than ever . . . . . !

WHERE WAS SHE! Still at Timmy Tewson's? She jumped out of bed, groped for the wall-light . . . . .

Something clicked as she pressed the button . . . . . but NO LIGHT CAME . . . . .

With a terrible premonition in her mind, she felt for the window-shades until she found one . . . jerked at the cord . . . heard it fly up . . . . .

She was still IN DARKNESS!

She thought of the dizzifying drink in the Negro dive.

"God! God! Am I BLIND" she screamed.

* * *

Mrs. Constance Oakes surveyed herself from top to toe in a long mirror in the library.

Yes, she was handsome—bien soignee."

And she didn't look anything like her real age (which was all of 46), she confidently assured herself.

She wouldn't LET herself grow old. It was all a matter of thinking YOUNG thoughts, and having the right will power, and massage every day, and of course a first-class dressmaker . . . . . and not worrying.

Still, it was hard not to worry when one had fallen in love with a boy 20 years younger than oneself!

"A charming woman has no age!" Diaz had whispered to her this morning after her tango lesson at the club.

But she HAD felt stiff . . . and Diaz, in his capacity of dance instructor, demanded that his pupils all be "lithe."

The corseted brigade . . . those were the younger ones . . . he didn't understand that after one passed the age of 45, if one loved good food, and the cocktails, and soft living, and disliked exercise, one naturally lost the "boyish" figure of extreme youth.

Not that Mrs. Constance Oakes had ever been sylph-like. Unlike most American women, she had always enjoyed "dolce far niente" too much!

Ease Luxury!

These had been the principal reasons for marrying prosperous

Connie's heart thudded as she saw the handsome Spaniard waiting for her.

Michael Oakes.

Also, by the standards of 20 years ago, she had been "getting on" in years at the time of his courtship. When Michael came a wooing she had been 26.

Her people had very little money. The only "careers" for a girl at that period were either teaching or the stage.

The latter was terribly declassee, then. And for the school-marm business she had neither inclination nor a sufficiency of gray matter.

No! Constance wasn't clever. The thing for her was a "comfortable" marriage.

Not that she hadn't a tepid feeling of affection for her Michael. He didn't look a hero of romance, of course. Romance was well enough in books, she told herself, but in real life it would be uncomfortable.

Thus reasoned Constance 20 years ago. To escape the fate of being an old maid—for there were few eligibles in her country town—she would have married a man less attractive than Michael.

She didn't understand her daughter, Laurel, in the least. Between them there had never been any real intimacy.

But despite Laurel's pose of being so blase—Constance knew perfectly that the same ardent blood ran in Laurel's veins as in those of her father.

Sometimes it seemed to Constance, recently, as though both husband and child were strangers to her. . . .

A strength of body and mind they had . . . a questing eagerness in living.

Now, at the age of 46, Constance herself was beginning to wake up to life . . . was feeling the stir of something new and strange within her.

Romance she'd never understood except the material things she'd got out of Michael all these years, as the result of his early infatuation for her.

She hadn't wanted anything else from him. He paid her bills, maintained two homes for her, and gave her lavish pocket money. He didn't question her comings or goings. She hadn't thought about it at all before . . . but now it suddenly struck her that this man with whom she lived and ate meals and talked to every day (beyond maintaining her in comfort) meant nothing to her.

Love! She'd read of it in books, of course . . . but that had been all.

Now at the age of 46, what did this something mean that stirred within her bosom?

Why did her heart beat so whenever she neared the country club? Why was she so crazy about those tango lessons?

Because Diaz' arm was about her then . . .

Because Diaz had said things to her that were awfully disturbing . . .

Love? Was the handsome, black-eyed Latin really in love with her?

This afternoon, for the first time since the tango lessons had begun, she had consented to meet him—alone—for tea in a certain roadhouse.

He wanted her to fetch him in her car.

But Constance didn't trust her chauffeur.

Michael paid the man highly . . . was almost too familiar with him . . . she didn't want any of her private business to be repeated to her husband.

"But you will not drive me yourself? Just you and I? That would be won-der-ful!" Diaz had begged.

She regretted now her laziness in learning to drive properly . . . said something about her being nervous.

"But if we are to go out together, and enjoy ourselves, just you and I, it is necessary that you overcome the nervousness," Diaz told her practically.

"Can't you drive yourself?"

"I drive too fast. I have had mishaps. Temporarily . . . it is so stupid of the police . . . they have taken away my license."

Diaz had arranged for the hire of a car, from a garage owned by a friend of his.

The chauffeur was discreet, and would not talk. Mrs. Oakes was to walk to the bottom of a lane half a mile away . . . the car would be waiting, with Diaz in it . . .

It savoured of intrigue, which of course put more "kick" in it!

She walked the half mile to the rendezvous. The machine was there.

Her heart thudded as she saw the handsome Diaz waiting for her . . .

Synopsis

Laurel Oakes, "modern" to the minute, is invited by her friend, Imogen Gay, who is even more sophisticated, to attend a party in an old deserted farmhouse. When the party gets too wild for Laurel she leaves. Going to her roadster on a dark road, Laurel discovers the tires slashed. Running madly down the road, she is picked up by Bruce Harvey, a young physician, who takes her home. Laurel tells her mother that pleasure means more to her than love or romance. Laurel decides to make a favorable impression on Dr. Harvey when she returns home and discovers him having tea with her mother. Laurel rides to a hospital with Harvey and waits outside in his automobile for a long time until he returns. Later, Harvey tells Laurel that she ought to stop seeking pleasure and get married. Laurel stops in a speakeasy with Imogen and Freddie De Farge. There Imogen meets Samuel Schumph, a millionaire. The four go to a party at Timmy Tewson's. Imogen wins a bet by plunging in Tewson's pool and then he asks her to leave the place.

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

One of the outstanding attractions appearing before the Warner Theaters-Sun-Telegraph Junior Komic Club chapters in the Warner neighborhood theaters is Tampa, the internationally known magician.

Tampa is appearing at each of the theaters in turn, and wherever he is announced children attend in droves to see and hear him. Today he entertained the boys and girls of the Harris (Diamond Jubilee) chapter. The members of this big chapter come from South Side, West End, the Hill district and the South Hills. They were waiting patiently in line long before the box office opened this morning, and sat spellbound during Tampa's performance.

TAMPA PROGRAM

Derwin, the ventriloquist, was the feature of the program at the Harris (Etna) meeting today. Derwin and his talking dummy kept the children laughing. Boys and girls contributed songs, and numbers, and attractive prizes were awarded the winners.

Rhea, [illegible] made a big hit at the chapter at the Manor today. This clever artist invites boys and girls in the audience to make marks on a blackboard on the stage, and no matter what size or twist the marks makes, Rhea will make it a perfect picture by a few simple lines of his own.

SOUTH HILLS GETS KAY DEE

A record attendance greeted Uncle Kay Dee, well known radio man, at the South Hills (Dormont) Theater today. With him was his little radio company, with a scene from a fairy story. Rosemarie was there, too. Rosemarie grows more popular with every appearance. She plays her accordian, sings and leads the audience in community singing.

It was announced at all the chapter meetings yesterday that the Warner Theaters-Sun Telegraph Junior Komic Klub is planning another free show before Christmas. This will be at a downtown theater and children who have been attending their neighborhood chapter meetings regularly, will be admitted without charge.

Davis Points the Way

The Legislature, too, Should Support the Proposed $5,000,000,000 National Bond Issue.

While Gov. Pinchot and the Legislature dispute as to how the unemployment distress in the state shall be relieved, Senator James J. Davis points out a plan which will help the jobless not only in Pennsylvania, but in every other state. Davis has again shown real statesmanship in coming out for the $5,000,000,000 national bond issue proposed by William Randolph Hearst.

Five billions of prosperity bonds would finance a vast amount of public works, in the construction of which, as Senator Davis points out, Pennsylvania's coal and steel would be used. Representative M. A. Musmanno has introduced in the Legislature a resolution calling on Congress to authorize the $5,000,000,000 bond issue. It should be passed with acclamation.

Gov. Pinchot has appealed to the people to bring pressure to bear on the Legislature to support his relief program. The appeal is not likely to be effective, for even the points in Pinchot's program which the Legislature has resisted the least—the proposed taxes on cigarets and gasoline—are far from popular.

The Commonwealth is hampered in its relief plans, as the Governor points out, by the constitutional provision that "no appropriation, except for pensions or gratuities for military services, shall be made for charitable, educational or benevolent purposes to any person or community." But this clause is disregarded by general consent in the administration of the Mothers' Assistance Fund.

The Mothers' Assistance trustees are authorized to grant to any dependent widow as much as $20 a month for the first child and $10 a month for each additional child under 16. Thanks to the efforts of Senator Frank Harris, the Legislature appropriated at its last session $4,115,938 for the Mother's Assistance Fund for the 1931-1933 biennium. In view of present necessities the Legislature might well increase the appropriation.

Hardly a day passes that a case does not come to light of a needy mother who is having a desperately hard time of it in supporting her children. The publicity given the Munhall woman who, on being evicted from her home for nonpayment of rent, said she "would fight the army and navy" to keep her baby, has brought her some assistance. But it is to be feared there are hundreds of equally pitiful cases which escape public attention.

The mother of another baby that narrowly escaped being shot by a man firing at a bandit asks the Sun-Telegraph to protest against reckless shooting in the streets. She makes a good point. Shots should not be fired, even at a fleeing bandit, in a city street unless there is absolute certainty that no one else will be hit—and even the police sometimes make mistakes.

Louis Volpe, Wilmerding political leader, was held for the federal grand jury yesterday on a charge of selling liquor. Joe Engelsberg, former Republican chairman of the Third Ward, Pittsburgh, now serving a prison sentence for a prohibition offense, was refused a pardon. It is reassuring to note that political influence is not always able to circumvent the law.

Philadelphians are excited over an increase in their tax rate to the highest point in the city's history. In revenge for the raise, a real estate man announces, he is going to transfer 18 mortgage-burdened, tax-encumbered dwellings to the three councilmen who led the tax increase movement, and make them responsible for the burden which he can no longer carry. They will have to go into court, he says, with a bill of equity to have the conveyance set aside, and he is hopeful "it will cost them plenty."

There are many signs that Philadelphia property owners are desperate and indignant over their tax rate. But Pittsburghers would be happy if their rate were only as low. For every $100 of assessed valuation of land a Philadelphian will have to pay next year $3.13 for city, county and school purposes. But every Pittsburgher must pay at the present time for every $100 of assessed valuation of land $4.56 in a 25.5-mill city tax, an 11.75-mill school tax and an 8.375-mill county tax.

Let Philadelphians pay taxes at the Pittsburgh rate, which is 45 per cent higher, and they will have something to complain about. The clamor that is being raised in the city on the Delaware is of interest to us because it furnishes an outside viewpoint of what constitutes a burdensome tax. From the Philadelphia standpoint our tax would be considered outrageous—and so it is!

Gradually the opposition to innocent Sunday amusements is breaking down. The outlook becomes steadily brighter for the repeal of the Blue Law of 1794. A resolution has been introduced in the Philadelphia Council authorizing Sunday amusements and sports after 2 p. m., provided the gate receipts are given to charity. It was stated that many Pennsylvania cities are now following this policy.

One of the most encouraging items in the indus- trial news of the week is that the coal operators have at last got together on a program for rehabilitating their business. They have met determined opposition to their plans, which call for [illegible] consolidation of sales agencies, merger of producing [illegible] lower freight rates and an embargo on petroleum products. Some good is bound to come out of it. The coal industry is on its back that it can scarcely move without improvising [illegible].

The interna[illegible]art exhibition at Carnegie Insti- tute closes tomorrow. Some more of the paintings will be found reproduced in full color in the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. The Gravure Section will also present another page of photographs of interesting babies. The pictures of bygone days on the "Remember?" page will bring back memories.

The situation in Europe is critical. To inform yourself as to what is going on you should read the article of Dr. Fritz Klein, noted German editor, in the March of Events Section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. He predicts that Hitler will participate in the government of the Reich by spring. Guglielmo Ferrero, the Italian historian, is the author of an important article about the situation in China.

The Great Protector

(Copyright, 1931.)

This double barred cross means a great deal to 700,000 men, women and children in this country.

To many of them it is their only salvation. For it is the symbol of the Tuberculosis and Health Association, which wages incessant war on the white plague that costs 92,000 lives a year.

Its funds come from the sale of Christmas seals. They are only a penny apiece. And there is hardly anyone so poor but that he can buy a few to carry on the fight.

Multiply a hundred thousand times this woman and her child. You get an idea of the sad plight in which many of our fellow-beings find themselves. Many have waited too late, but there is hope for the majority.

There is hope if they do not wait too long. To find them out and to help them by providing food, rest, fresh air and medical treatment is the aim of the organization that the double-barred cross stands for.

The pennies you spend to buy seals will keep that cross the barrier that it is. They will help the poor sufferers and lift the children into a healthy environment and an open-air classroom.

The unfortunate can be saved if you do not wait.

Your pennies are of vital importance to the afflicted. So buy your Christmas seals NOW.

Hoover's Repudiation; Walker's Masterpiece

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

Two interesting items in the news this week—the brilliant, moving human appeal from the big brain and the big heart of Jimmie Walker for Tom Mooney, and the astounding repudiation of Mr. Hoover and his administration in a district ordinarily Republican by 30,000 majority.

We wonder if Mr. Curtis, the Vice President, would have announced his candidacy for renomination had he anticipated the news from Jersey. Nowhere has there been a more distinct, decisive referendum on the administration at Washington. The Democratic nominee for Congress made Mr. Hoover the issue.

In a district normally Republican by an enormous majority one would have thought the Republican nominee would have welcomed such an issue with unholy glee. Instead he bitterly complained that his Democratic opponent was "dragging national issues into a purely local contest." With that he reached the peak of the humor of the campaign. But the issue being made it had to be accepted; and so the fight was waged on Mr. Hoover.

And on that issue a district normally 30,000 Republican goes Democratic.

Fight Was Made On the President

Percy Stewart, the Democratic nominee, is a business man and banker. He indicted the administration on the counts of a business man who knows that the business of this country has not been wrecked by any act of God, who understands that the stupidities of economic policies in Washington have played a mighty part in the catastrophe that involves us all.

He indicted the President for his stubborn indifference to the obligations of a government when 7,000,000 breadwinners are jobless and 20,000,000 are in distress; for the utter lack of leadership in a crisis and the unvarying ineptitude when attempts to lead were made; for the petty partisan opposition of the President to the Wagner bills that had the support of press and public opinion, of economists and business men.

The fight was made on the President and not on prohibition; for both the candidates were opposed to prohibition, and they differed on the President. The fight was won by Stewart on economic issues and the collapse of an administration in the midst of human misery.

The People Want A Change

All this gives point to Hiram Johnson's almost cruel statement that Mr. Hoover would give joy to the rank and file of his party by announcing that he does not choose to run. When the Republican nominee in Jersey protested with deep feeling against making the President an issue he said precisely what Johnson said in different words. And what a strange situation!

In the campaign of 1906 the Republicans declared on every stump that there was but one issue—and that was Roosevelt. In 1914 the Democrats insisted there was but one issue—and that was Wilson. Whenever a political party protests that its President and leader is not an issue it means just one thing—that this President is a failure in the opinion of his own party, that his leadership is leading toward sparse pastures.

We hope, under the circumstances, the Democrats in Congress will not act upon the theory that it is their duty to "follow the President." The people clearly want a change and intend to have it.

A Masterpiece Of Eloquence

Out in San Francisco this week, a man of slight frame, wracked with illness, stood with flashing eyes and pleaded with the Governor for the liberty of "one of the least of these."

Mayor Walker should have been in bed, but there he stood, sustained by a deep conviction, and out of his mind and heart he wove an argument that is a masterpiece of eloquence. Great arguments can be evolved out of the mind alone, but the magic touch of eloquence can only well up from a heart that beats in sympathy with suffering.

There was eloquence in the speaker's condition, but he did not play on his passing physical infirmity. Usually they do. We recall two other memorable speeches made under similar handicaps.

A century and a third ago Fisher Ames, on the verge of physical collapse, dragged himself to the House of Representatives to make a brilliant plea for his party on the Jay treaty; and in the trial of Andrew Johnson, Henry Stanbery, seriously ill, ignored his physicians' orders and forced himself to the Senate chamber to make his memorable argument. Both artfully touched on their condition, but Walker didn't; and his was the better art, and all the better because not intended.

And his was the greater courage; for Ames plead for an Administration and a party; Stanbery plead for a prosecuted President; and Walker for a lowly man in prison.

Walker Has Rendered A Great Service

Walker is not the first lawyer who has felt obliged to make reference to this hue and cry "against an 'outside' lawyer." When Sergeant S. Prentiss, greatest of all American orators, made his classic argument in the Wilkinson murder trial in Kentucky, much was said about the "impudence" of this Mississipian; and when Daniel W. Voorhis made his superb plea for John Cook, one of John Brown's men, in the court of Virginia, something was said of the "impudence" of this Hoosier.

The Walker speech, as a work of art, is a masterpiece.

He has rendered a great service in getting the facts before the public; and he added a sensational new phase—the admission of the District Attorney who prosecuted Mooney that public policy would be served by his pardon. Thus the record stands:

The judge who presided at the trial of Mooney asks for pardon.

The jury that convicted asks for pardon.

The District Attorney who prosecuted asks for pardon.

And they ask for pardon because the prosecuting witnesses now admit they gave perjured evidence.

The Problem Is to 'Pass Prosperity Around'

In the symposium at Columbia University on trust laws, a professor from Yale assailed the anti-trust laws intended to protect the American people from the domination of the monopolies that have properly been repugnant to the Anglo-Saxon race for centuries. He thinks these matters should be left to "business" itself. We don't.

We are more impressed with the reply of Prof. Frank Fetter, of Princeton, who denies that the anti-trust laws have broken down and he puts his finger on the trouble when he says:

"It is the enforcement that has broken down." This agitation to give Big Business the right to do as it sees fit means just one thing, and Fetter tells us what it is.

"Big Business would replace competition with a plutocratic oligarchy of industries, privileged to determine whether they wish to make the public pay."

And this, as Fetter says, means "industrial feudalism." And this means economic slavery. The problem in America is not to accentuate the pyramiding of a few fortunes; the problem is to "pass prosperity around"—when we get it back.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Sufferings Sylphs.

"What is your favorite dish?" inquires one of my favorite newspapers—right out of a clear sky.

Suffering sylphs! My favorite dish! I could no more name my favorite dish, than the father of seven could tell you which is his favorite child! Just thinking it over leaves me weak and perishing with hunger!

On Monday, give me a nice, juicy, rare steak. Or a thick slice of red roast beef, with a huge baked Idaho potato and an order of broccoli with Hollandaise sauce. Oh, yes, and endive salad with roquefort cheese!

But, on Sunday, I prefer a dainty roast fowl. White meat of turkey, or a delicious fried chicken, Maryland, with plenty of cream sauce and corn-fritters or flaky hot biscuits. Oh, yum! Carry me back to Ole Virginy.

* * *

On Tuesday, I may have a yen for a large plate of antipasto, followed by a steaming dish of minnestrone or ravioli topped off with spumoni, black coffee and cheese. (Good heavens! I'm famishing!)

On Wednesday, you can give me some nice hot pancakes with honey for lunch. But, by dinner time, I'll be pining for a generous double-order of Bor-lo-gai-main. That's the Chinese piece-de-resistance—chicken with mushrooms and bamboo sprouts and water-chestnuts. Follow that up with some preserved star-fruit (golden limes, to you). And a pot of tea served in quaint, funny little Chinese cups, and I'm happy!

On Thursday, my "favorite dish" will probably be an English mutton chop. Or a steak Bernaise, with that lovely French mushroom sauce. And, on Friday, you can't insult me by offering me a cold boiled lobster with magonnaise, or a dish of white-bait, or creamed shrimps or steamed clams!

But, on Saturday night, I can eat in ANY language, if you'll take me to a smart place, where the music is good and the people are interesting.

Isn't it AWFUL? Here am I, with a talent for eating in seven or eight languages. And the doctor has got me on a rigid diet of buttermilk, dry toast and pineapple! I'm STARVING.

* * *

Oh well, this world is full of starving women. Women who are starving for sweets, candy and cake and ice cream. Women who are starving for flattery and attention. Women who are starving for publicity. Women who are starving for LOVE!

* * *

But, I'm only starving for SOLID FOOD! Give this little girl a hand-out, Doctor.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—My friend Philadelphia Jack O'Brien has been after me for several years to drop around and see him now and then for a little workout. I always made some excuse until the other night when he added to his invitation: "It won't cost you a penny."

I was there next morning before the sun or Jack were up. "Just slip into a pair of shorts and fool around with Indian clubs. I'll have a shower and join you," he called. I'm no particular Adonis in shorts, but for that matter I don't believe Coolidge would be either.

When Jack came out, he took one look and went right into a booming laugh. He finally slowed up but burst out again. "I can't help it," he said. "I just happened to think—ho, ho, ho—of something—har, har, har—I read in the papers this morning." But all the time he was looking at my legs.

He told me first to try a rowing machine. "Just for a little limbering up," he explained. As I would bend forward and tug back like a real athlete he would chant "Heave ho, heave ho!" And something snapped where my suspenders cross. I couldn't straighten up. "What's the trouble?" asked Jack.

"I don't know exactly," I whispered, "but it looks to me as though I have heaved my last ho." Then I whined: "It is rather sad when a man with the best part of life before him suddenly runs out of hos." But he had an idea of taking care of that.

While he was going through setting-up exercises and partaking of a light breakfast, he instructed his valet and masseur to iron out the kinks. "And then," he added brightly, "we will put on the gloves for several swings, a shower, another rub down et voila!"

"Bon, monsieur," I replied quicky, as I always do when switching from one language to another. I may not be much of an athlete, but linguistically I am just too cute. How's this for Latin without even looking up from the typewriter: Veni, vidi, vici?

Sometimes I'll be talking along dolce far niente and before I know it, ici on parle francais, grosse gesundheit. I'm jabbering in all kinds of language. Fan me if I start swooning again. Anyway the masseur stretched me on a slab. "A slob on a slab," I cracked. You know, full of wit every minute. He ran his fingers lightly over my ticklish torso in a sort of flowery approach and then suddenly smack! Smackety, smack, smack, he began to beat a bolero up and down the spine. "You bane—smackety, smack, smack—a noospaper feller?" he inquired. I nodded "But I'm saving up to go into wholesale groceries." I lied hastily, hoping he would let up, the big Swede.

After he smacked one side raw, I tremoloed! "How did you happen to take up the smacking business?" But he didn't reply. He had just discovered a kink in my head. A quick twist and there would be an explosive pop. "There must be a little of the firecracker in me," I twittered. He looked at me with a quizzical dumbness. I explained: "Neck goes pop, pop, pop like a firecracker." He grinned: "Yes sir, that's right. Next time bring your papa and we fix heem, too." After that there was nothing to do but give up.

By this time Jack joined us, but I had yanked a sheet over my legs. He could give me a free workout, but I saw no reason to give him a mess of free laughs. Not with bonds defaulting the way they are and everything. The first thing he did was test my knee jerks with a whack under the knee cap. I know that gag so I kicked high in the air. "Fine," he said, which made a sucker out of him.

* * *

Well, sir, then we put on the gloves. "Listen, troglodyte!" I warned, thumping his off bicep, "don't go belting me in the pan. I've been croupy lately anyway, dizzy spells, hot flashes and every other Tuesday ringing in my ears!" He told me not to worry, just like the darling bankers tell everybody. And urged: "I won't touch you, but you knock my block off." Then he stuck out his powerful chin and I swung from the ankle, missed and swirled in to a mystified squat. That aroused my dander—I've been up to my ears in dander ever since the crash anyway—and I tore into him. But he was never there. I beat, spun about, swung again, missed and then began to flail. I'm open to all comers in a flailing match; incidentally. On the way home I'd suddenly stop and begin to flail. In fact I feel a spell coming on now. Don't hold me! I'll be all right.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Mamie is going to have a baby and she's badly worried. You'd be, too, if you were in Mamie's shoes.

Mamie is a waitress in a cheap restaurant. She's 23 years old—a tired, thin girl with straight brown hair and pale eyes. During the noon hour rush her flesh turns a clammy gray and her hair clings in wet strings to her cheek. Her nose is pinched—she moves clumsily. Two or three times lately she has stumbled and dropped big trays of dishes. It's bad enough having a baby when you can take things easy, but it's pretty awful when you're a hasher.

Of course, everything would have been all right if Fred had been regular. But he wasn't. Her folks told her he wouldn't be. But—you know how these things are. She was crazy about him. So they were married—even if he didn't have a job. That was two years ago. He left the week after she told him she was going to have a baby. Sulked all week and nagged at her. She flared up at him. It was the only time she had. She said she always wanted a baby. She was going to have it. . . . The next day he lit out. She hasn't heard from him since.

Well, there was nothing unusual about that. Hundreds of them do. Mamie didn't take on much. She cried a little. Then packed up—moved into a room by herself—went back to work.

But now she's up against it. She'll have to give up her job in a couple of weeks. Then she's arranged to stay with two other girls until she goes to the "City and County." But after that—what? Another job hashing, of course. But what about the baby?

A day nursery—then pick it up on the way home? But you can't do that if you're working nights. Nor can you keep any job very long if you're up all night washing and tending a tiny baby.

A room with a nice, motherly woman who'll take care of the baby during the day? Sounds wonderful but try and find it.

Give it up to an institution until it's older? No. Give up her own little helpless baby—No—No—No.

Then—what?

Mamie wouldn't be asking what if she lived in Russia. Over there they don't leave babies or mothers to the doubtful mercy of shiftless husbands or faulty institutions. The Russians VALUE mothers—VALUE babies—MAKE A PLAN FOR THEM.

Working mothers, under the Soviet, get four months leave with full pay, during pregnancy—two months before confinement and two months after. They receive free hospitalization with the best possible care. Newly born children are provided with clothes and bedding if such is needed.

When the mother returns to work she does not leave her baby behind her. She brings it with her to the factory or institution where she works, and places it in the nursery with the other workers' babies. There is every modern convenience in that nursery and the most expert service. Until it is 3, the baby spends its days in that nursery and the mother is given time out to nurse it and play with it.

After the baby is 3 it goes to the kindergarten. During the summer, the day nurseries and kindergartens are moved to the country and health resorts at the expense of the state.

And, during this time, the mother works at her desk or bench, doing the same work as a man, receiving the same wages.

That is the way they do things in Russia. We're sorry for the Russian women and children. We boast about our superior treatment of our women and children.

"Those barbarous Russians!" we say.

But the Russians listen to our boasts contemptuously. For they, in turn, are sorry for American women. They know that America has the highest maternity death rate of any civilized country—that more mothers and babies die through abuse and neglect. They know that America makes more provision for her dairy cows, for her draught horses, than she does for her working mothers. Thinking of Mamie—or the tens of thousands of Mamies, the Russians sneer.
